PARTY POLITICS

BRITISH policy towards the Central African Federation is unfortunately developing into a political issue. It had been hoped that it could be removed from party politics and that a bi-partisan approach could be made to resolve the issues at stake.

The only rational way to attempt to settle the destiny of this vast area with its varied resources and millions of people is to appoint an all-party commission to prepare for the constitutional talks in 1960.

It is right that the main responsibility should fall on Great Britain to enlighten the Dark Continent after the hundreds of years of association with the country.

Gigantic Task

BUT it will not be right if the gigantic task develops into a free for all because of differences of political opinion existing between the Conservatives and the Labour Party.

To date vestiges of impartiality in Westminster have been cast aside and a dog fight has ensued with the apparent object of scoring party points at the cost of the well-being of Central Africa.

The realities in Nyasaland and in the Rhodesias have been submerged in the prejudices of both British political parties in debates in the House of Commons, leaving a feeling of hopelessness and despair. If this feeling is as acute in Britain as is reported then how much greater must be the impact in the territories concerned?

Anger

SOCIALIST anger over the anti-African legislation in Southern Rhodesia has led them to demand that the British Government should do something about it—namely vetoing the legislation but this drastic step would only tend to worsen the situation.

Sir Roy Welensky, the Central African Prime Minister, has been the main victim of the attacks and the subject of a campaign of abuse unprecedented in the history of Commonwealth relations and his emotions can be well appreciated.

Sir Roy has been accused of attempting to smash the African Congress. He has been called untrustworthy in the House and a ruffianly Premier outside it. It is certain that no overzealous statesman has ever been subjected to so much vilification in Britain.

Not Function

SIR Roy himself said: "While political parties in the House of Commons may dislike each other intensely and may dislike parties and Governments elsewhere in the Commonwealth, it is not part of their function to interfere with the running of fellow Commonwealth countries."

How dangerous this interference is can be gauged from the fact that Sir Roy has already hinted that if the Socialists came into power Southern Rhodesia would secede from the Federation and it is more than likely that Northern Rhodesia would follow.

If this happened there is a strong chance that both countries would be drawn towards South Africa and the plight of the black Africans might be worse than it is now.

HEAVY FINE FOR PUBLISHING INDECENT ARTICLES 'SUPPRESSION THE NEXT TIME'

Warning To Newspaper By Court Magistrate

A magistrate today warned a Chinese newspaper convicted of publishing an article of an indecent nature, that if the offence were repeated he would order its suppression.

The magistrate was Mr I. T. Morris. He said this after the proprietor, publisher, editor and printers of the Kwok Wah Daily News, of Lee Yuen Street East, were each fined $3,500 or two months at Central Magistracy.

HUSBAND KILLED: WIFE AWARDED $3,000 DAMAGES

The widow of a fish stall foki, who was electrocuted by a meat firm's refrigerator, was awarded $3,000 as damages this morning.

Later, after it was disclosed that the father of the deceased had come from China and was in Court, His Lordship ordered that he should receive $1,000 out of the sum awarded.

Search For Missing Man Continues

By OUR OWN REPORTER

The search for the missing oil merchant, Mr Wong Ying-kau enters its tenth day today with Police apparently no nearer a solution than they were when he was first reported kidnapped the weekend before last.

All that a Government spokesman would say this morning was that full police inquiries were continuing and the extensive man-hunt for Mr Wong will continue until he is found.

On Saturday, the wife of the missing man announced that a reward of $50,000 would be paid for information leading to the return alive of Mr Wong.

Earlier the Police announced a $5,000 reward.

Mrs Wong's reward offer is seen as an attempt to split the gang believed to have been involved in the abduction of Mr Wong.

Various reports have been published about ransom demands by the kidnappers, and the amount demanded has varied between $500,000 and $200,000.

The hope is that someone with information will be encouraged by the size of Mrs Wong's reward offer to tip off the Police.

The only new development reported today is that Mrs Wong has been put under Police protection, but this could not be confirmed.

It is said that she has given the Police additional information on Mr Wong's relations and business associates to assist them in their search.

The search and inquiries are being conducted both in Hong Kong and the neighbouring territories of Macao.

The Yat Keng Meat Co. of 42-44 Jardine's Bazaar, ground floor, and its 29 partners consented to judgment for that amount before Mr Justice A. D. Scholes.

Her Claim

The widow, Wong Fook-chee, who lives in a village near Canton, sued through an attorney, Li Yau.

She had originally claimed unspecified damages, alleging that the defendants had been negligent in failing to maintain the refrigerator in a proper and safe condition, and that this resulted in the death of her husband, Ng Yat-shing.

Ng worked for a fish stall dealer who made use of the meat company's refrigerator to store fish. He was electrocuted on September 21, 1957.

Settlement

The settlement was today announced by Mr D. A. Wright, representing the plaintiff (instructed by Mr J. C. B. Slack, of Hastings and Co.).

Mr Victor Gittins (instructed by Mr J. N. Smart, of Wilkinson and Gish), appearing for the meat company, confirmed the arrangement.

The First Storm Warning Of The Season

The first storm warning of the season was issued by the Royal Observatory yesterday, stating that a tropical storm was situated off the coast of Saigon.

But this morning a further message said the storm was decreasing in intensity.

The spokesman of the Royal Observatory said this morning that this was about the time for the start of the typhoon season. But he added that this first warning was only a storm warning for shipping, and was not immediately affecting the Colony.

This storm is the first reported to the local area, he added.

General instability in the weather is causing the morning showers, the spokesman went on, and this is usual at this time of the year. The showers are expected to continue this afternoon, but will lessen, giving place to fair periods.

The showers this morning had brought about one inch of rain, which is up to 10 mm.

Mr M. Morley-John, Crown Counsel, said he had instructions from the Attorney General to ask for suppression of the newspaper. Pornography in newspapers must be stamped out, he said.

Mr Morris said he would not on this occasion order suppression of publication of the newspaper. "But if the offence is repeated, I will most certainly do so."

The defendants are Tsang Wai, proprietor, Chan Hang, publisher, Yau Heung-lam, editor, and the Shen Kee Press, printers.

In his judgment, Mr Morris said many people in this Colony were inclined to attribute the prevalence of certain offences, in part at all events, to the influence of indecent publications and exhibitions.

"This Court, can in the circumstances do something to deter those who indulge in a disreputable trade by imposing suitable punishments."

Referring to the article complained of, which consisted of two letters and the answers thereof, Mr Morris said these were filthy.

"There can be no doubt about that. They have, in my opinion, no decent message of any kind to the readers of the newspaper concerned."

"They have nothing. They are just filth," Mr Morris said.

Foul Thoughts

It was recognised so far as the law was concerned defendants and others were entitled to think what they liked, however foul their thoughts, even to say what they liked provided they did not break the law, Mr Morris went on.

"But once they translate their wicked thoughts into print and publish matter which is positively indecent as has been done in this case, then I feel that the offenders should be severely punished."

Mr Morris said he might in future be "persuaded to pass sentences of imprisonment if I am satisfied that there is no other way of dealing with this type of offence."

"Some fines are futile," he said, "even heavy ones may not affect some people and imprisonment without the option of a fine may often be the only suitable punishment."

In a plea of mitigation, Mr Peter Chan, representing all defendants, asked the Court not to order suppression of the newspaper. He submitted that suspension of publication even for one day would ruin the newspaper.

A 'Chance' Plea

The proprietor of the newspaper came to Hong Kong when he was 15 and started his life as a newspaper hawk. Mr Chan said. Last year, he operated his own newspaper with a capital of $40,000 which he had borrowed from friends. This capital was used up and he made a further loan of $20,000.

Mr Chan submitted that this new venture should not be destroyed and should be given a chance to continue its operation.

The editor Mr Chan said, was a journalist with many years of experience in Hong Kong. "It may be due to ignorance or carelessness that he did not read his newspaper. Therefore he should be punished."

With regard to the printers, Mr Chan said, the editor Mr Chan said to print eight different editions daily.

Royal Sisters On Tour

The two royal sisters are thousands of miles apart but both are on tours. In the above pictures, Princess Margaret stepped back in time when she paid a visit to the Dorset farm on Guernsey during her tour of the Channel Islands. Here everyone was dressed for the part in period costume carrying out the homely tasks of the island as they would have been 100 years ago. During her tour the Princess patted this well-behaved, long-eared donkey, as she spoke to its owner dressed in period smock.

Meanwhile in the lower picture the Queen, who is on a tour of Canada, accepts a moose-skin beaded jacket from Indian Chief Willy Elash of the Nascapue tribe during her visit to Schefferville, Quebec. Prince Philip also received a jacket from the chief. — Central Press Photos.

Crack Down On Yellow Culture

Singapore, June 28.

Next on the list of "Yellow Culture" to be attacked by the new Singapore Government are law, girls and "queer" houses.

Minister for Labour and Law, H. M. S. said law girls were being "cracked down" especially after closing hours. He said "queer" houses were mushrooming in hotels which have been closed by law.

The Minister said a check on 170 bars showed 201 girls were under the age of 21 and 200 were above 21. He said he had called some of the girls to earn a living but there were certain people in the bars who were "queer" and he was cracking down on them.

Sequel To Chinese Smuggling Plot

Australians May Demand Strict Screening

By A CHINA MAIL REPORTER

Australian security police are expected to demand strict screening of all Chinese seamen travelling to Australian ports on vessels from Hong Kong following the discovery of an international plot to smuggle Chinese into Australia.

So far both the local police and the shipping company which owns the Taiyuan—on which, Sydney Police allege, illegal immigrants travelled to Australia—have not had any request from the Australian authorities.

But as soon as the investigations have been completed in Sydney the demand is expected.

The security angle is one major problem. The Australians are reported to be concerned about the possibility of Communist agents entering the country via ships from Hong Kong.

Main Problem

But the main problem centres around the immigration lock. Sydney Police are reported to have said that "in the past ten or more years, thousands of Chinese stowaways may have entered Australia this way."

Main object of the Sydney police inquiries will be to get the co-operation of the Hong Kong Police to track down the mysterious Chinese leader of a gang smuggling Chinese people into Australia — at HK$50,000 a time.

Then they will turn their attention to the Chinese agents and associates of this gang who are believed to be crewmen on ships visiting Australia.

It is these men that the Australian security police hope to flush out in the screening of all Chinese crewmen.

A Sydney Police spokesman said he believed the current case in which seven Chinese have been charged with assisting the entry of illegal immigrants, would have worldwide repercussions.

Those Charged

Of those charged so far, six are reported to be Hong Kong born. One is said to be a Chinese national.

The Hong Kong men charged are Wong Shi-shen, 32, Wong Chin-woo, 45, Wong Kwong-yu, 40, Sung Pak, 34, Kwang Gen-yuan, 44, and Yung King-wi, 34. The Chinese national is Wang Shun-chin, 35, a carpenter.

One of the dead men found floating in a canal around in Sydney harbour near the Taiyuan — it was discovery of this and another body of a Chinese man which led to the arrest of the seven other Chinese — is said to be a native of Kwangtung province.

He is Choi Shui-wing, aged 67. He comes from "Yao Yili county" according to a local report.

Before the Communists took over the mainland, Choi was manager of a restaurant in Canton.

Didn't Pay

He later came to Hong Kong with his wife and children and ran a shop called Yee Chong Lung.

The business closed down and Choi changed to making buttons. However, his factory did not pay the way.

Choi said that they had been in Hong Kong for 20 years and had been in the business of making buttons for 10 years. He said that they had been in the business of making buttons for 10 years.

FLAMING HORROR KILLS 35

Meldrim, Ga., June 28. Tank cars of highly inflammable cooking gas exploded today at the moment a freight train rolled across a crowded river recreation beach.

The state highway patrol estimated that as many as 35 were dead and 75 injured.

It was impossible to get an accurate and complete list of the dead and injured because of the tremendous pressure at all hospitals in the area.

The tragedy occurred on a wooden trestle spanning the Ogeechee River 20 miles west northwest of Savannah.

Without Warning

Twenty-five feet beneath the bridge, a swimming beach on the north end and a fishing spot on the south were crowded with Sunday picnickers, bathers and fishermen, some of them in boats.

Suddenly, and almost without any warning, flaming hell erupted from the trestle above. Within 15 seconds, the entire area was bathed in the searing flames of thousands of gallons of gas.

At least nine cars were reduced almost immediately to cinders. Some charred bodies were removed from the automobiles.

The bathhouse was swept away in one burst of fire. It was not known if anyone was in it at the time. — UPI.

TRAFFIC CENSUS IN CITY

A census of traffic using the roads in the city area bounded by Garden Road, Queen's Road East, Charter Road and Murray Road, will be carried out by the Public Works Department tomorrow.

The census will begin at 8 a.m. and conclude at 12 noon. It is expected that the census will be carried out by the Public Works Department tomorrow.

Kassem Wins Temporary Victory Against Reds

Beirut, June 28.
Iraqi Premier Karim Kassam has won at least a temporary victory against the country's Communists, according to reports reaching here today.

Kassem has forced Iraqi Communists to the brink of a showdown they do not want, the reports said. Independent-minded Kassam acted in fear that the Communists, Iraq's best organized and most efficient political force, would seek to replace him with somebody friendlier to Communist aims of Middle East domination, they added.

Kassem has moved to block Communist use of public meetings, government offices, and semi-military units, the reports said.

EMERGENCY DECLARED

Alarmed Iraqi Communists have declared "a state of emergency" and ordered party members to carry their weapons, the Lebanese newspaper As-Sahafah said today. Kassam, who once rolled on Communist support after his July 14 seizure of power in a bloody revolution, last week was reported to have taken these moves.

Clamped down on the semi-military and Communist-dominated Peoples Resistance Force, Kassam is reported to have said that national security no longer required such a force.

Banned public demonstrations in Baghdad.

★ Granted amnesty to all Iraqi citizens who fled after the July coup. Baghdad Radio invited exiles to return and "live in dignity in their homes."

★ Arrested a number of leading Communist Army officers and Government officials. Reports here said Kassam ordered the arrests to head off a possible Communist coup.

NOT FORCING THE ISSUE

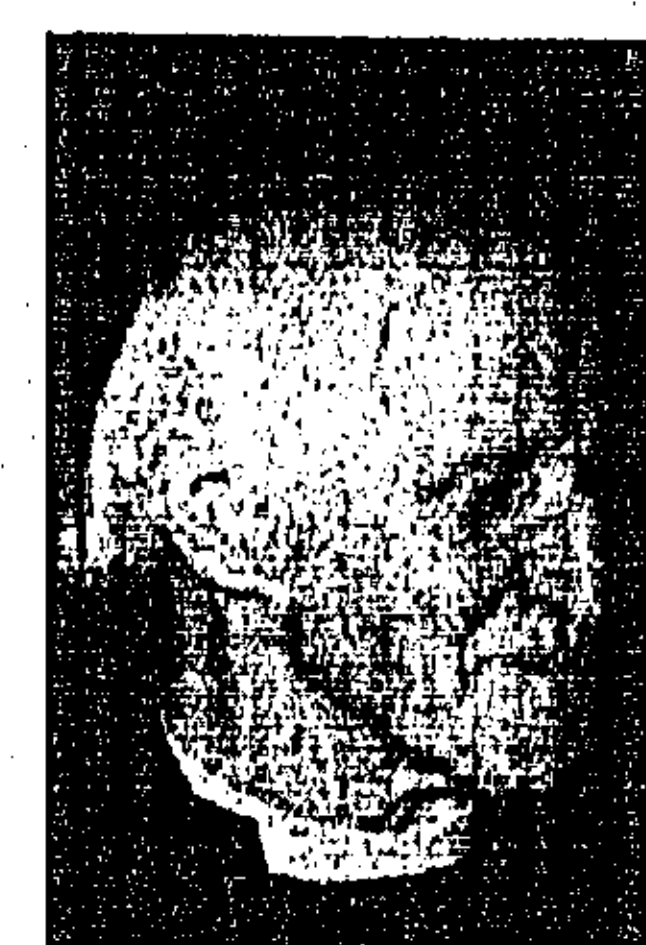

Political observers here had been claiming for weeks that Communists could take over Iraq virtually at will.

But they said the Communists did not yet want to force the issue against Kassam, whose regime ousted Iraq's former Western ally and never — but not into — the Communist camp.—UPI.

ARCHBISHOP AND THE RED DEAN AGREE!

London, June 28.

The Archbishop of Canterbury and the 'Red Dean' of Canterbury finally agreed that — that they disliked stained glass windows.

DR JOHNSON

Both Church of England leaders appeared at a Canterbury Cathedral meeting and the Archbishop, Dr Geoffrey Fisher, said, "must it always be a dim religious light?"

The Archbishop added that even on bright summer days the stained glass windows made it necessary to install electric light for the choir.

First Time

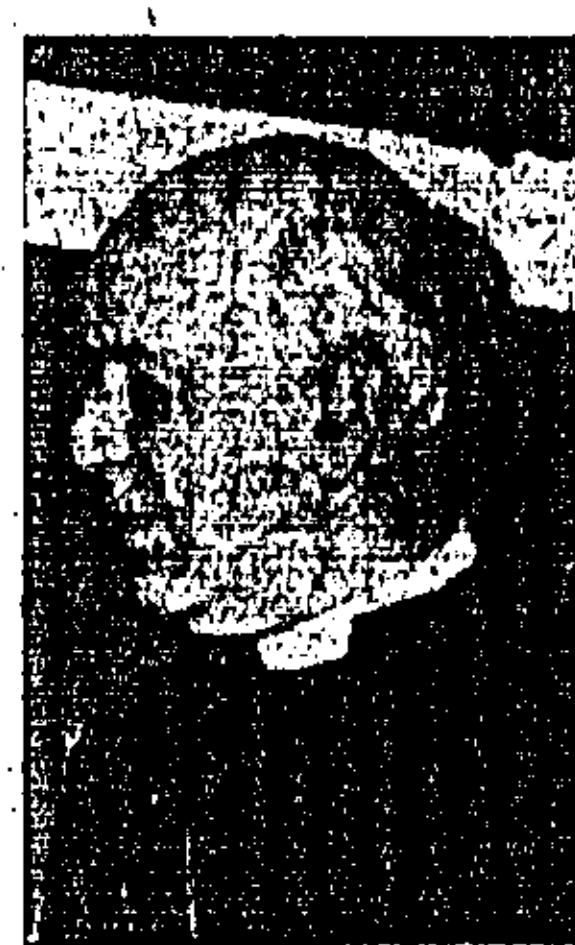

Hewlett Johnson, whose often pro-Russian political comments have irked other church leaders, said, "It is not often that the Archbishop and I agree, but on this we do."

The 'Red Dean' said that bombing in the last war broke the Cathedral's stained glass windows, and, for the first time, allowed him a good look at the huge Cathedral's inner architecture.

"The less stained glass in the Cathedral the better. We would be able to see some beautiful architecture never seen before," Dr Johnson said.

Stainless

The two church leaders' desire for a clean, well-lit Cathedral was expressed shortly before the meeting broke up to allow the persons attending to view the Cathedral's south choir transept — where a new stainless glass window has just been installed.—UPI.

The Pope's First Encyclical Letter Soon

Vatican City, June 28.

Pope John said today the first encyclical letter of his reign would be made public in a few days.

The letter would deal with "truth, loving charity and peace," the Pope said.

He would develop the theme that "the prince of darkness" was working in every way against the freedom which the Church needed, and had put up a wall separating some parts of Christ's flock.—Reuters.

Sukarno To Enforce Plan

Djakarta, June 29.

President Sukarno will enforce his "guided democracy" plan for Indonesia by decree.

This he is expected to do on his return home from a two-month world tour today to face a political and economic crisis.

The Army has banned political activity in the country since June 2 when the constituent assembly failed for the third time to approve Dr Sukarno's eve-of-departure proposal for a return to the 1945 revolutionary constitution, providing for rule by presidential decree.

After Dr Sukarno has had three days' rest, the Prime Minister, Dr Djuanda, is expected to present to him the government's three alternatives for overcoming the political crisis, the sources stated.

Alternatives

They are said to be:

★ To amend the 1945 constitution to meet the wishes of the Moslem bloc whose opposition prevented assembly approval of its return;

★ To put the plan to another assembly vote, or

★ To push it through by decree.

The sources believe that within two weeks Dr Sukarno will take the last course which would bring into being a party-elected, partly appointed parliament in which the armed forces would have 35 representatives. But he will probably also make big concessions to the moderate Moslems, the sources added.—Reuters.

SOVIET NAVAL ATTACHE CAUGHT WHEN ABOUT TO ASK FOR ASYLUM

London, June 28. Soviet Government agents in Britain seized Naval Attache Capt. Aleksandr Dmitriev, whose wife and daughter fled to asylum, just as he was about to ask asylum here, it was reported today.

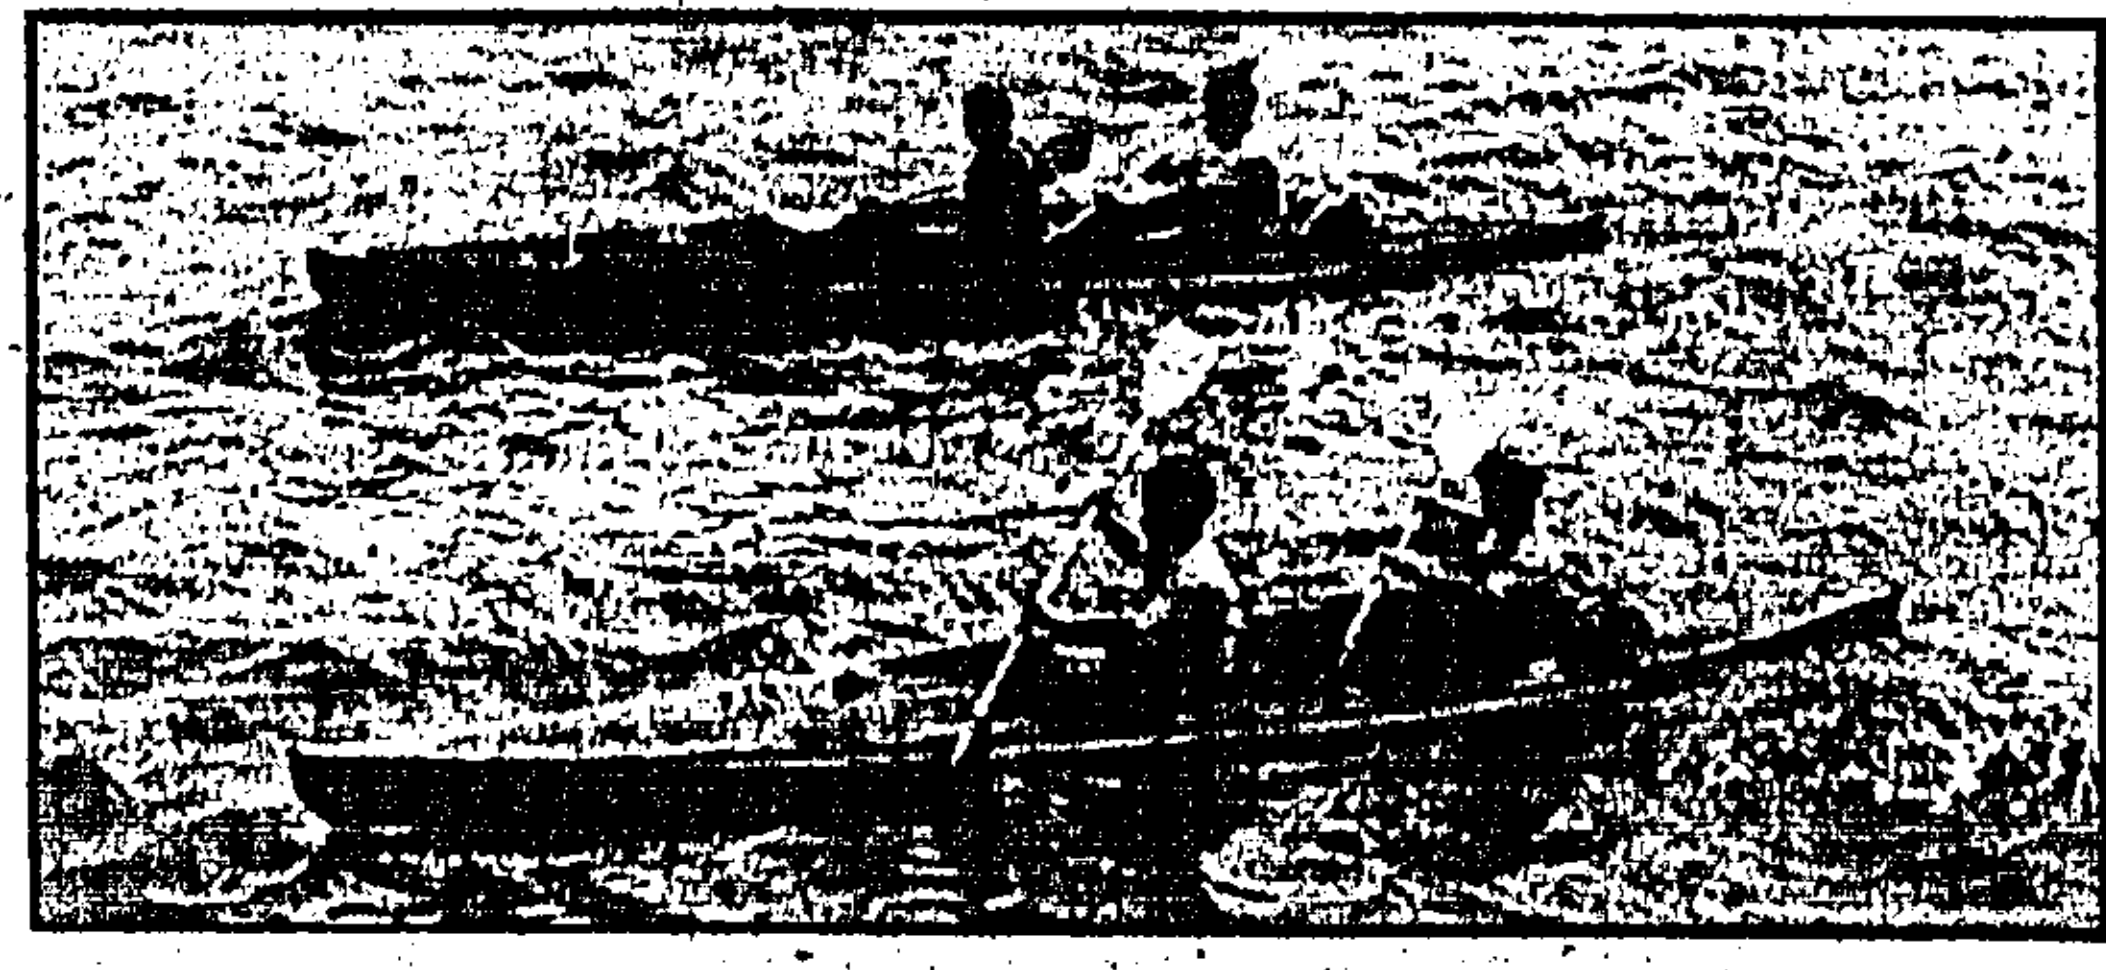

Newspaper dispatches quoted a Soviet Radio broadcast as obliquely admitting as much "last night. It said Dmitriev had planned to stay in England, as his wife Nina and five-year-old daughter Lena did. "But thanks to the watchfulness of our security men he was instead taken at once to the Embassy to explain what was behind the whole affair," the broadcast was quoted as saying.

The broadcast was quoted by the newspaper the Sunday Graphic. Other radio monitoring stations here said they had heard no such broadcast. Madame Dmitriev made a dramatic flight to freedom last month when she and Lena disappeared from the Russian Embassy's weekend resort in South-east England. They later asked for political asylum, which was granted. Dmitriev was put aboard a plane for Moscow. Representatives of Britain's Home Office asked him before the plane took off if he really wanted to leave. "I wish to go to Moscow," Dmitriev replied.—UPI.

PRINCESS MEETS FIANCE

Brussels, June 28. Princess Paola Ruffo di Calabria arrived in Brussels tonight by air and was met by her fiance, Prince Albert of Belgium and his father, ex-King Leopold.

The Princess was accompanied by her mother, Princess Luisa, and her brother, Prince Alexander.

A crowd of several hundred people gathered at the entrance to the airport, applauded the engaged couple as the royal car left for the castle.

The Queen And Duke Attend Non-Conformist Service

Kingston, Ontario, June 28. The Queen and Prince Philip tonight worshipped for what was believed to be the first time at a church service other than that of the Anglican faith.

The Queen and her husband attended evening service at Sydenham Street United Church in this city midway between Toronto and Montreal. Royal Tour Commissioner Lieut-Gen. Howard Graham said the Queen made a specific request to attend a non-conformist church service during her 15,000-mile Canadian visit.

Robeson Sings At H-Bomb Rally

London, June 28. Paul Robeson, the American Negro singer, told "ban the H-bomb" demonstrators here today that coloured people had a special reason for opposing nuclear weapons.

Coloured people did not want to be denied a future in which they could make their full contribution to the world's culture and life, he told a massed crowd of about 20,000 people in Trafalgar Square.

TRADE UNIONISTS

About half that number, many of them trade unionists, and students had marched the mile from Marble Arch to Trafalgar Square.

Mr. Robeson, who was with his wife, is now appearing at Stratford-on-Avon in Shakespeare's "Othello."

He was given an ovation from the crowd, which included some 2,000 demonstrators from the provinces.

The singer wound up his speech by singing three songs, including "O'Man River."

The rally, organized by the British Peace Committee, passed a resolution protesting against the H-bomb and U.S. bases in Britain.

REPRESENTATIVES

It was decided to appoint two people to represent the organization and lobby the Big Four Foreign Ministers when they meet again in Geneva next month.

The chairman of the mass meeting, Mr. D. N. Pritt, a Queen's Counsel, said Dr. Hewlett Johnson, the Dean of Canterbury, popularly known as "The Red Dean" had agreed to be one of them.—Reuter.

Showing Effects

The service was the first major appearance for the Royal couple after they arrived aboard the Britannia, which was beginning to show the effects of daily dockings.

About 300 small craft, ranging from outboard motorboats to big diesel cruisers, and auxiliary-powered sailing yachts swarmed around the Britannia before it left Brockville. Some ignored warnings by Royal Canadian Police and the presence of two U.S. Coast Guard cutters and ventured within a boat's length of the big yacht.

During a three-hour stop at Kingston en route to Toronto the Queen and Prince visited the Royal Military College and old Fort Henry, both of which they saw in 1951 when the Queen was Princess Elizabeth.

Wharfies Refuse To Work Ship

Sydney, June 28. Four hundred tons of cargo, consigned to Brisbane, Melbourne and Fremantle in the Italian liner Sydney, will go back to Italy in the ship.

Waterfront unions have refused to work on the ship because its crew had joined an Italian seamen's strike.

It will be at least two months before the cargo is re-shipped from Italy.

The liner was berthed in Friday in Sydney Harbour without the aid of tugs which are under the union ban.

The Sydney carried a general cargo from machinery to dry foodstuffs and shoes.

When labourers unloaded passenger baggage and mail according to an agreement but oncoming passengers today had to carry their own luggage, with only crew assistance.—China Mail Special.

Fortune In Wild Pigs

Kuala Lumpur, June 28. Game hunters were today reported converging on a remote Malaysian town where a fortune in pigs awaits the killing.

More than 1,000 wild pigs have suddenly arrived in Maran in the east coast state of Pahang.

Dealers are offering at least $250 for each wild pig.

Hunters are offering to supply parts of Malaysia to Maran, where a day's shooting can earn $3450.—China Mail Special.

MILLION-YEAR-OLD ELEPHANT FOSSIL FOUND

London, June 28. A well-preserved fossil of a huge elephant, probably more than a million years old, has been unearthed in North-west China, the New China News Agency reported today.

The fossil elephant is 25 feet long and 15 feet tall, the Chinese agency said in a broadcast beamed to Tokyo.

One tusk alone is reported to be 10 feet long and weighs more than 200 pounds.

The agency said the elephant was found in the Shimen county, Shensi Province.

Peasants who were building a river dike in 1955 first found the fossil, which was washed into the dike by floods one million years ago, the agency said.

Crustal bones, tusks and molar teeth, spine, ribs, skull and shoulder bones and thigh bones were unearthed.—UPI.

Reporter Christopher Dobson on an 8,000-mile journey into the heart of a new empire

IN Mr K's 'WILD WEST'

Log-hut towns with TV sets and jets

From CHRISTOPHER DOBSON: Inside Siberia.

THIS is Khrushchev's Wild West. This is the empire the Russians are building and peopling. Frontier towns have streets paved with foot-long lengths of log hammered upright into the ground—yet are served by Tu104 jets.

Towns like Irkutsk, a Birmingham in the making, with a tremendous new hydroelectric station and smoke stacks streaming blackly over the rough-hewn log houses.

And towns like Yakutsk, for which I am heading on a six-day, 8,000-mile tour.

I am covering this wide, immense land by jet, a battered old biplane, by car, lake steamer, horseback, and my own two feet. Beside me in the jet whistling at 600 miles an hour across Siberia was a gaunt old peasant woman, brown, with slant eyes, her head shrouded in a white kerchief, with the lines that come from much toil and much grief wearing into her face and her blunt and calloused hands gripping the arms of her seat.

She is a symbol of what is happening in Siberia today with the jet age being grafted on to the Siberia we all know about—the Siberia of exiles, of wolves, of vast wastes of forests and snow and ice, and the bitter killing cold.

She was the first impact that Siberia made on me on this journey of exploration into places where few Englishmen have been before.

It is with much pride, therefore, that I tell the story of the next old lady I met but here.

LADY ON THE LAKE

She is English, and has worked in the south of Siberia just 100 miles from the Mongolian border for the past 55 years. When I saw her she was suffering the indignity of being scraped and painted, but still she maintained her pride.

She is the steamship Angara, built by the Armstrong Company, of Newcastle, in 1904, and shipped overland in pieces 3,000 miles to Lake Baikal where she was reassembled and has been bustling around the lake in summer ever since.

She had a sister ship once. But Czechs burned her during the Revolution. Lake Baikal is the deepest freshwater lake in the world, nearly a mile deep. No other man lived on its banks. The ice is so thick in winter that trains cross it.

COATS USED AS SAILS

But you may soon be seeing Lake Baikal for yourself because the Russians say they are going to open it up as a tourist spot. It is a natural, I can just see the posters: "Come to sunny Siberia. Some of the finest fishing in the world."

That is true. And you can go back to the local at home and say offhandedly: "Had wonderful sport. Caught halibut and a fair-sized cormorant." These fish abound in the lake, but are found nowhere else in the world.

Colds
Even the slightest cold is to be feared. Do not let it spread! Defeat it from the start by taking 2 "CAFASPIN".

Men at work on a collective farm near Irkutsk.

You can also go seal shooting, and the Baikal seals are unique. They have bred for thousands of years, cut off from the rest of the seal world.

Then there is skating. The locals go whipping across the lake in the winter holding their coats open to the wind as sails.

But these plans of tourism are still in the future like so many other things inside Siberia. It is still frontier country, like the American West, a hundred years ago. Life is rough.

And yet at a kolchoz—a collective farm—outside the industrial city of Irkutsk I was shown an art gallery in the village clubhouse. Just plain straight-forward art, but nevertheless something I had never expected to see in the heartland of Siberia.

This collective farm, called "in the way of Ilyich" (Lenin), is vast—nearly 70,000 acres of virgin ground carved out of forest and scrub.

One of the farm leaders, Nizamov Faradievich, a square-jawed looking man, showed me around. We went by car and then on horseback over enormous fields where the "cucurbit" the maize which is such an important crop here, was just sprouting.

We watched the women at work on the machines, and Nizamov took me into their houses. "These are not the worst houses in the village," he told me, "but neither are they the best."

Outside they looked rather drab with their wooden logs weatherbeaten and dull, but inside everything was shining like the proverbial new pin.

Somehow they reminded me of my grandmother's house when visitors were arriving, with portraits of ancestors, brass knobs, and antiques, cats, and babies everywhere.

But granny never had a stove. Instead of her aspidochelone I saw big rubber plants. And TV aerials look strange waving over these log houses.

One housewife asked me what she should do to improve her home and Nazimov Faradievich, grinning conspiratorially, ducked out of the door.

But I was not going to be caught by that one. I told her I thought she had the best of all possible homes—and said farewell.

THEIR PAY

All the workers on the farm get a guaranteed wage ranging from 7½ roubles to 15 roubles a day. But actually the salaries are much higher.

In the summer the women who look after the pigs make about 1,200 roubles a month. The lowest wage goes to the woman who runs the village post office. She gets 300 roubles a month.

[One rouble will buy a 1lb loaf. A pair of shoes costs anything from 100 roubles upwards, you can reckon about 28 roubles to the £1.]

The head of the farm is paid 2,500 roubles a month, but it all depends on the success or failure of the farm.

He is supposed to make a profit of 11,000,000 roubles this year. If he makes more then he gets a bonus. If he runs at a loss then his salary is cut. It is a fine profit-making inducement.

There are two main problems on the farm. Problems which bedevil all of Siberia. There are not enough people. And not enough houses for the people that are there to live in.

The houses, still built in the traditional wood log fashion, are going up, but Nizamov Faradievich, who would like to have 3,500 people on his farm, can only muster 850.

THEIR HEAT

It is a hard life, with most of the work being crammed into the three short months of summer before the snow and ice clamp on to the land again. Summer in Siberia, though short, is a great deal hotter than Brighton ever is.

From the farm I drove to Irkutsk over a dirt road—with the dusts swirling up hot and heavy between the pine and birch trees which march across Siberia in their millions.

Irkutsk is being opened to British tourists for the first time this summer.

It is a Birmingham in the making. It has a well-established mica industry. Enormous deposits of coal and natural gas have been found.

Power to work the town's industries is now coming from a brand new hydroelectric station on the Angara River.

The town itself is a bit grim, a bit grey, and cars take tremendous punishment on its rough and rocky roads which are scarred by the winter's ice.

There is the usual housing shortage and water is carried from pumps two buckets at a time on a milkman's yoke.

Yet there is a theatre where I listened to a passable performance of "Travolta" and was besieged by students from the Foreign Languages Institute who were eager to learn everything they could about Britain and other countries of the West.

THEIR FREEZE

One girl recited "The House That Jack Built" to me and asked "Please explain, what does that mean?"

But then, Irkutsk is in the civilised part of Siberia.

Jet airliners come roaring down on to its modern airport and there are hot water and baths in the hotels—though mine was so crowded there were people sleeping in the corridor outside my room.

I only hit the real Siberia, the frontier land where survival comes first, when I left Irkutsk for the 1,000-mile swing by bush plane in and out across rivers up to the northeast to Yakutsk.

There, if you dig 2ft down even in the summer, you hit the perma frost—ground that is permanently frozen.

And if you blast down into the perma you are quite likely to find the body of a mammoth, just as if it had come out of the deep freeze.

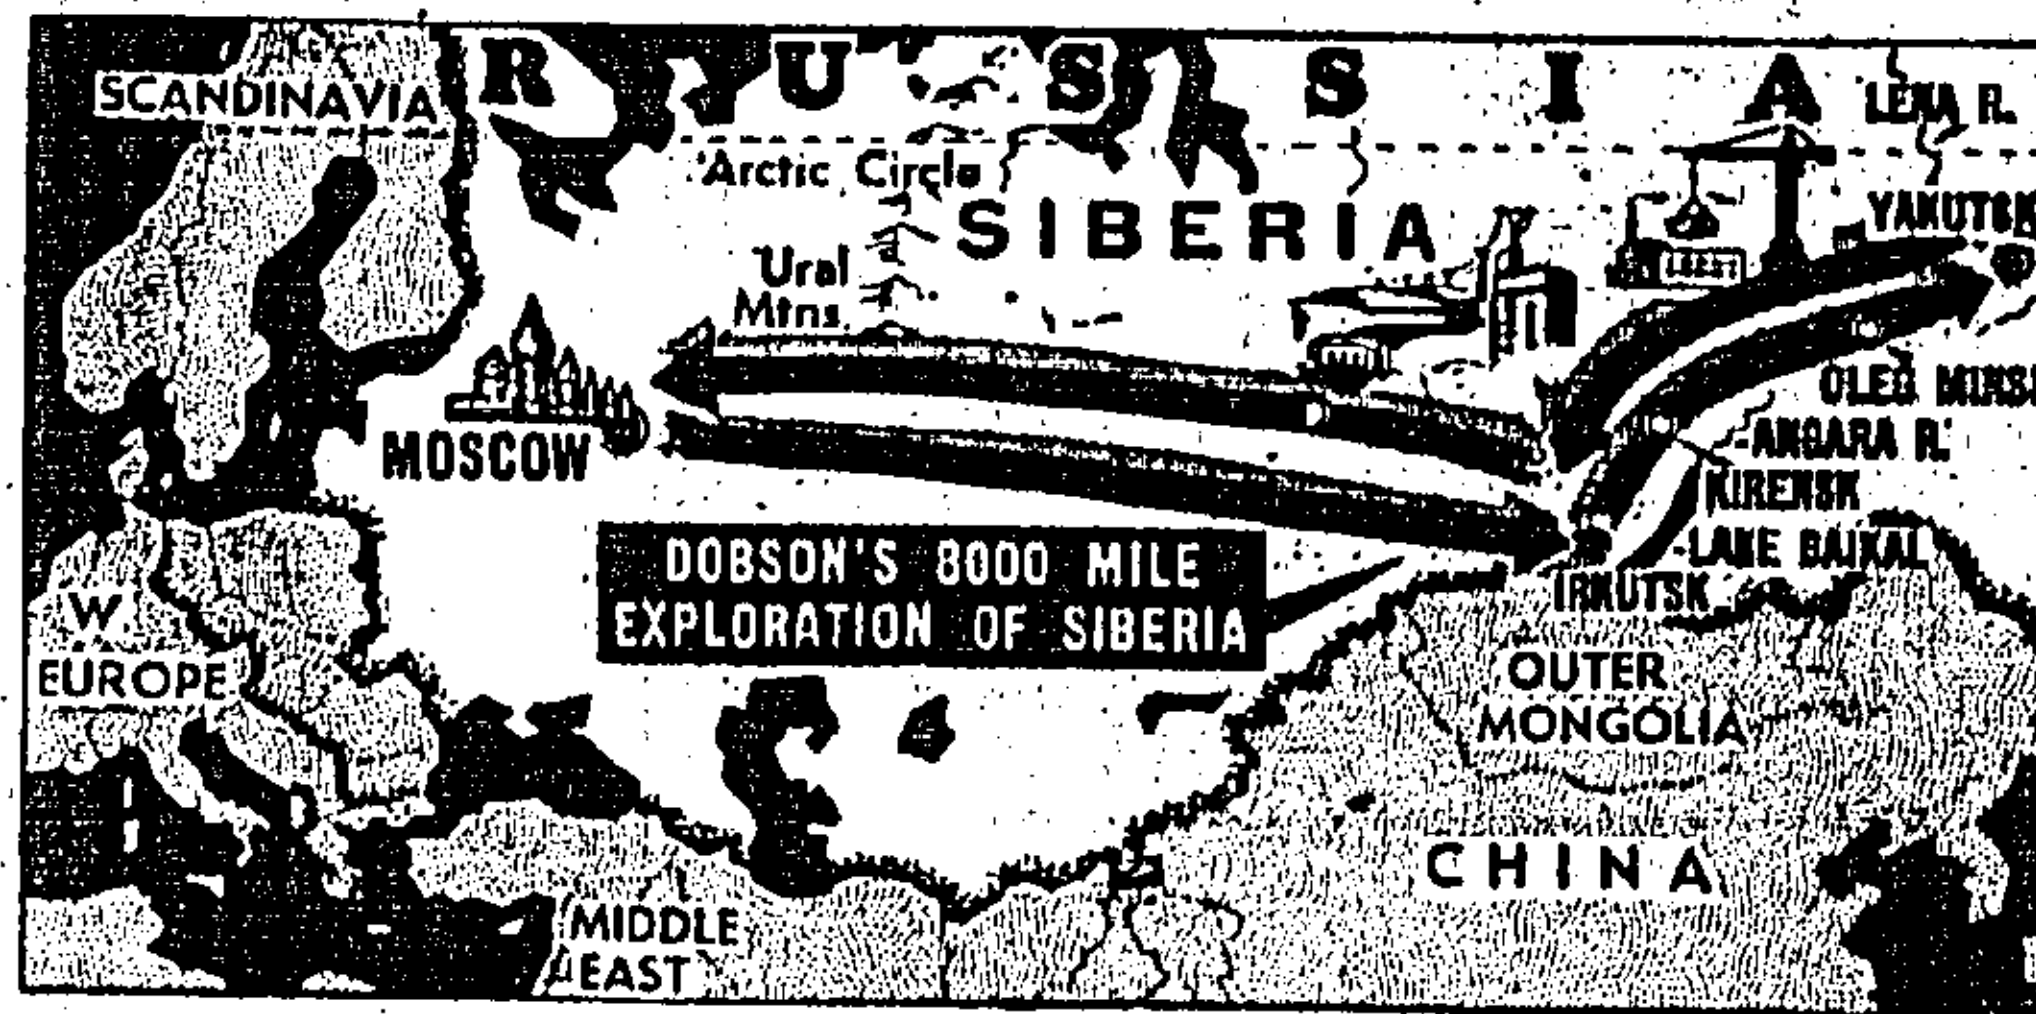

The people still show their common ancestry with the American Indians—high cheekbones, hooded eyes, and red-brown skin.

Wherever I went I was greeted with warmth—and a great deal of surprise for an "Anglican". It is a very rare bird indeed in the heartlands of Siberia.

In this wild and distant country Russia has pinned her hopes for the future.

But my full report on Yakutsk will keep, like the mammoth in the ice, until tomorrow.

THREE hundred and sixty-one acres of land in the heart of London. Generations of nannies have aired their charges in it. The meeting place of young lovers, cranks and weary shoppers. This is Hyde Park—the park that Billy Graham (and Jayne Mansfield agrees) says "shocked me." Today the China Mail begins a four-part profile of one of London's most fascinating landmarks.

by TOM POCKOCK

After dark: the biggest

"NO respect for the Duke of Wellington, have they?"

The police sergeant flashed his torch on the bushes behind Aspley House. There was scuffling in the undergrowth.

"Come on, take a walk!" he shouted. Sheepishly they emerged. Half a dozen women, about a dozen men.

Each caught the edge of the sergeant's tongue. "Take a long walk, go on," "Don't let me see you again tonight," "Out of the park and make it quick."

Then, to me: "Those girls work the Aspley House railings every night. I might have grabbed all this little lot. Outraging public decency. Wilfully interfering with the comfort or convenience of any person in the park. Behaviour likely to cause disorder or a breach of the peace. Going on an enclosure. But it wouldn't stop the prostitution in Hyde Park."

The sergeant and I walked briskly towards The Dell, where, by day, nannies and Kensington children watch the rabbits play. "Here we go again," said the sergeant, pointing to the trees. "Why didn't you bring Billy Graham with you tonight?"

Furtive figures dodging, lurking and hiding among the trees, sometimes altogether against the sparkle of Knightsbridge or Park Lane, sometimes lit by the dull red glare in the sky from the lights of Mayfair and Bloomsbury. The flash of the sergeant's torch on startled faces, reddened faces. A scene in fantastic contrast to the mellow, sunlit park of early evening.

But I was prepared for contrast. That afternoon, Mr Tom Barbour, the cheerful Scottish superintendent of the Central Royal Parks, had been proudly showing me his four acres of greenhouse, geraniums for Whitehall window-boxes, garden for a Foreign Office bouquet.

Very bad

Then, as he discussed the latest planting of summer flowers in the sunken garden at Kensington Palace, he started talking about prostitution.

"Let of trouble with prostitutes," he said. "It's very bad down in the Bandstand Shrubbery. We're having to put in a special fence round the down beds. Even then they may get in. But sometimes we can get

'em for wilful damage of plants, walking across flower beds, you know."

"It's ironical. A prostitute can be fined only £2 for soliciting but she might have to pay £20 for damaging my flowers."

"Billy Graham is quite right about the park," he chuckled. "Like a bedroom, he said it was 'a place that as a compliment to the condition of my meadow grass.'"

Earlier I had discussed the same problem with the Bailiff of the Royal Parks, Major Ian Hobbs (Eton, Seaford High-landers and, after St. Valery, a prison camp). His approach was briskly military.

"We've tried barbed wire. We've wired the perimeter of shrubberies and we've put down wire in the bushes. But you can't turn the public's playground into a barbed wire enclosure. In any case some of the prostitutes carry wire cutters."

Some strategic trees, he explained, had had their trunks painted with a mixture of grease, creosote and tar. This had been effective until the women had marked the painted areas.

"I live in Hyde Park," said Major Hobbs, who has a charming Georgian house near the Serpentine. "I see this vice all the time outside my own front gate. The only solution is a stricter law."

"Do you know, when the Wolfenden Report was published the prostitutes thought it already was law and they vanished from the park? Of course they were back in a couple of days."

Efficiency

At Hyde Park police station I found an air of frustrated efficiency. Under their keen new superintendent, George Burgoyne, who learned his job in the tough Harrow Road, 48 policemen (not counting mounted police and police-women) try to maintain law and order in the 361 acres of King Henry VIII's hunting park.

"We've two sets of problems here," I was told. "One lot by day. One lot at night. By day we have traffic control, parking problems and keeping roads clear for royal cars. We have political demonstrations, and parades. We have lost property and lost kids. Plenty of work. At night we get the 'lame' that's what we call prostitutes. They moved down from Marble Vale and Paddington when the park railings came down during the war. We know at least 500

'regulars' and on a fine night you'll get at least 100 working the park, in cars, along the carriage ways, among the trees, in the bushes. We charge about half a dozen a night."

The present £2 fine for soliciting seems ridiculous to all London policemen. In Hyde Park many believe the trouble could be instantly reduced if prostitutes who climb the fences—and most of them do—were always fined the maximum £5 penalty for "going on an enclosure."

Meanwhile the night patrols go on.

It was midnight and the gates of Hyde Park were at last being closed. A policeman pointed across a low fence to Kensington Gardens.

"They close these gardens an hour after sunset," he said. "There's lots of trees and bushes in there and not many fences. But you get no vice in Kensington Gardens. Quite a different atmosphere in there."

"On a fine night you could let kids play round that Peter Pan statue."

WOMANSENSE

YOUR BIRTHDAY... By STELLA

MONDAY, JUNE 29

BORN today, you are that rare combination of the "dreamer" and the "doer." As a child, you probably have been very moody and may have appeared lazy to many grown-ups. But your mind is always active, and sometimes the less active you are physically, the more active your brain is. Then, when you get something all planned in your mind, you are ready to act. As you grow into adulthood, your ability to carry out your ideas will account for a great deal of your success.

The stars have given you keen intuitions, and at times you appear to be psychic. Yet, your practical good sense often leads you to disregard these hunches and to act upon advice from others. For you, this is unwise. Heed those inner promptings, even if it means standing up against major opposition.

TUESDAY, JUNE 30

CANCER (June 22-July 23)—Good and ill are so intermixed something that may look like a wonderful opportunity needs thorough investigation.

LEO (July 24-Aug. 23)—Adhere to normal routine today and save wear and tear on your energies. Patience will win out.

VIRGO (Aug. 24-Sept. 23)—A journey is indicated in the near future. You would be advised to make advance preparations.

LIBRA (Sept. 24-Oct. 23)—Both assets and liabilities are in evidence today, but the balance weighs in your favour if you are wise.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)—Don't be misled by conflicting conditions. Use your best judgment in decisions and all is well.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 22)—Postpone new ventures until next month. Spend today

High-tempered and at times temperamental, you should cultivate self-control for he who is master of himself can more easily become a leader of others. You have a rather emotional nature and are inclined to show your feelings. You probably will have one great love in your life. If that culminates in marriage, you will be exceptionally happy. If not, you might not wed, for you never would be the type to accept second choice.

Among those born on this date are: Peter Paul Rubens, Flemish painter; William Edgar Borah, Idaho legislator; Owen Davis, playwright; George Ellery Hale, astronomer; John Quincy Adams Ward, sculptor; St. George Tucker, Virginia jurist. To find what the stars have in store for you tomorrow, select your birthday star and read the corresponding paragraph. Let your birthday star be your daily guide.

winding up this month's current affairs.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 23-Jan. 20)—Take an optimistic point of view and you can attract the best vibrations today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21-Feb. 19)—Contentment with what you have is the answer to your happiness just now.

PISCES (Feb. 20-Mar. 20)—Take the lead and organise things according to your own ideas. This ends all confusion.

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 20)—There may be romance in store for you. Your best day this week, too!

TAURUS (Apr. 21-May 21)—A good day for business as well as making plans for future events. Arrange your vacation plans.

GEMINI (May 22-June 21)—You may take a carefully calculated risk today and make an important advance on the job, too.

JACOBY on BRIDGE

SOUTH'S three no-trump bid was a terrific gamble but he was one of those players who just had to be shut out.

South thought about running to four diamonds after East doubled and even more about it after North redoubled but he finally decided he might as well take his beating at no-trump as anywhere else.

Instead it was East and West who took the blow. South won the opening spade lead in his own hand and went after the club suit. When the jack of clubs fell from the West hand on South's second lead he had four club tricks.

There were still plenty of problems left in the play and you readers can have a lot of fun working them out if you wish. Suffice to say that if South played carefully, he might well have gone down and if East and West played badly South might have gathered in an overtrick. As it was, three no-trump redoubled and made was reward enough for his dangerous risk.

Patterson's Peek-A-Boo Defence Weak

JOHANSSON EXPECTS TO WIN RETURN BOUT IN SEPTEMBER

New York, June 27.

Ingemar Johansson, the new world heavyweight champion, said today he expects to beat Floyd Patterson again in their September return bout, "because of weaknesses in his peek-a-boo defence."

Burly, brown-haired Ingemar, who floored Patterson seven times in the third round last night for a technical knockout, indicated the September bout also would be staged at Yankee Stadium when he said: "I'll train again at Grossinger's."

It was at Grossinger, New York, where he trained for his smashing upset over Patterson before a crowd of 21,061. And it was at Grossinger where he carefully held back his right ist, now called the "Goteborg thunderbolt."

However, promoter Bill Rosenbloom, who estimated he lost about $40,000 on the fight which had been postponed on Thursday night because of rain, said he would not pick the city for the return bout until about July 20. But he admitted he already was studying the Yankee Baseball Club's home schedule for September.

Rosenbloom and Irving B. Kahn, president of the Teleprompter Corporation, estimated that Patterson and Ingemar will receive the largest purses of their careers from last night's bout—even before the movie money comes in.

They figured about $222,000 for ex-champion Floyd and about $331,000—far above his $100,000 guarantee—for the new king of the heavyweights. Patterson's previous largest purse was $301,382 for his fourth defence against Roy Harris at Los Angeles last August.

The figures announced today for stadium receipts were: total attendance 21,961; paid attendance, 18,216; gross gate, $370,712; net gate, $407,150; federal taxes, $40,007; state taxes, $23,505.

Weak Defence

Johansson was guaranteed $100,000 against 20 per cent of the net gate and 20 per cent of theatre-TV, radio and movies receipts. Patterson gets 30 per cent of the net gate and "slicing" percentages up to 80 per cent on "theatre-TV, radio and movies."

Watching the movies of the fight at his suite in the Commodore Hotel today, Ingemar remarked that the peek-a-boo defence used by Patterson was weak.

Ingemar, in tan slacks and T-shirt, illustrated by holding his forearms upright before his face.

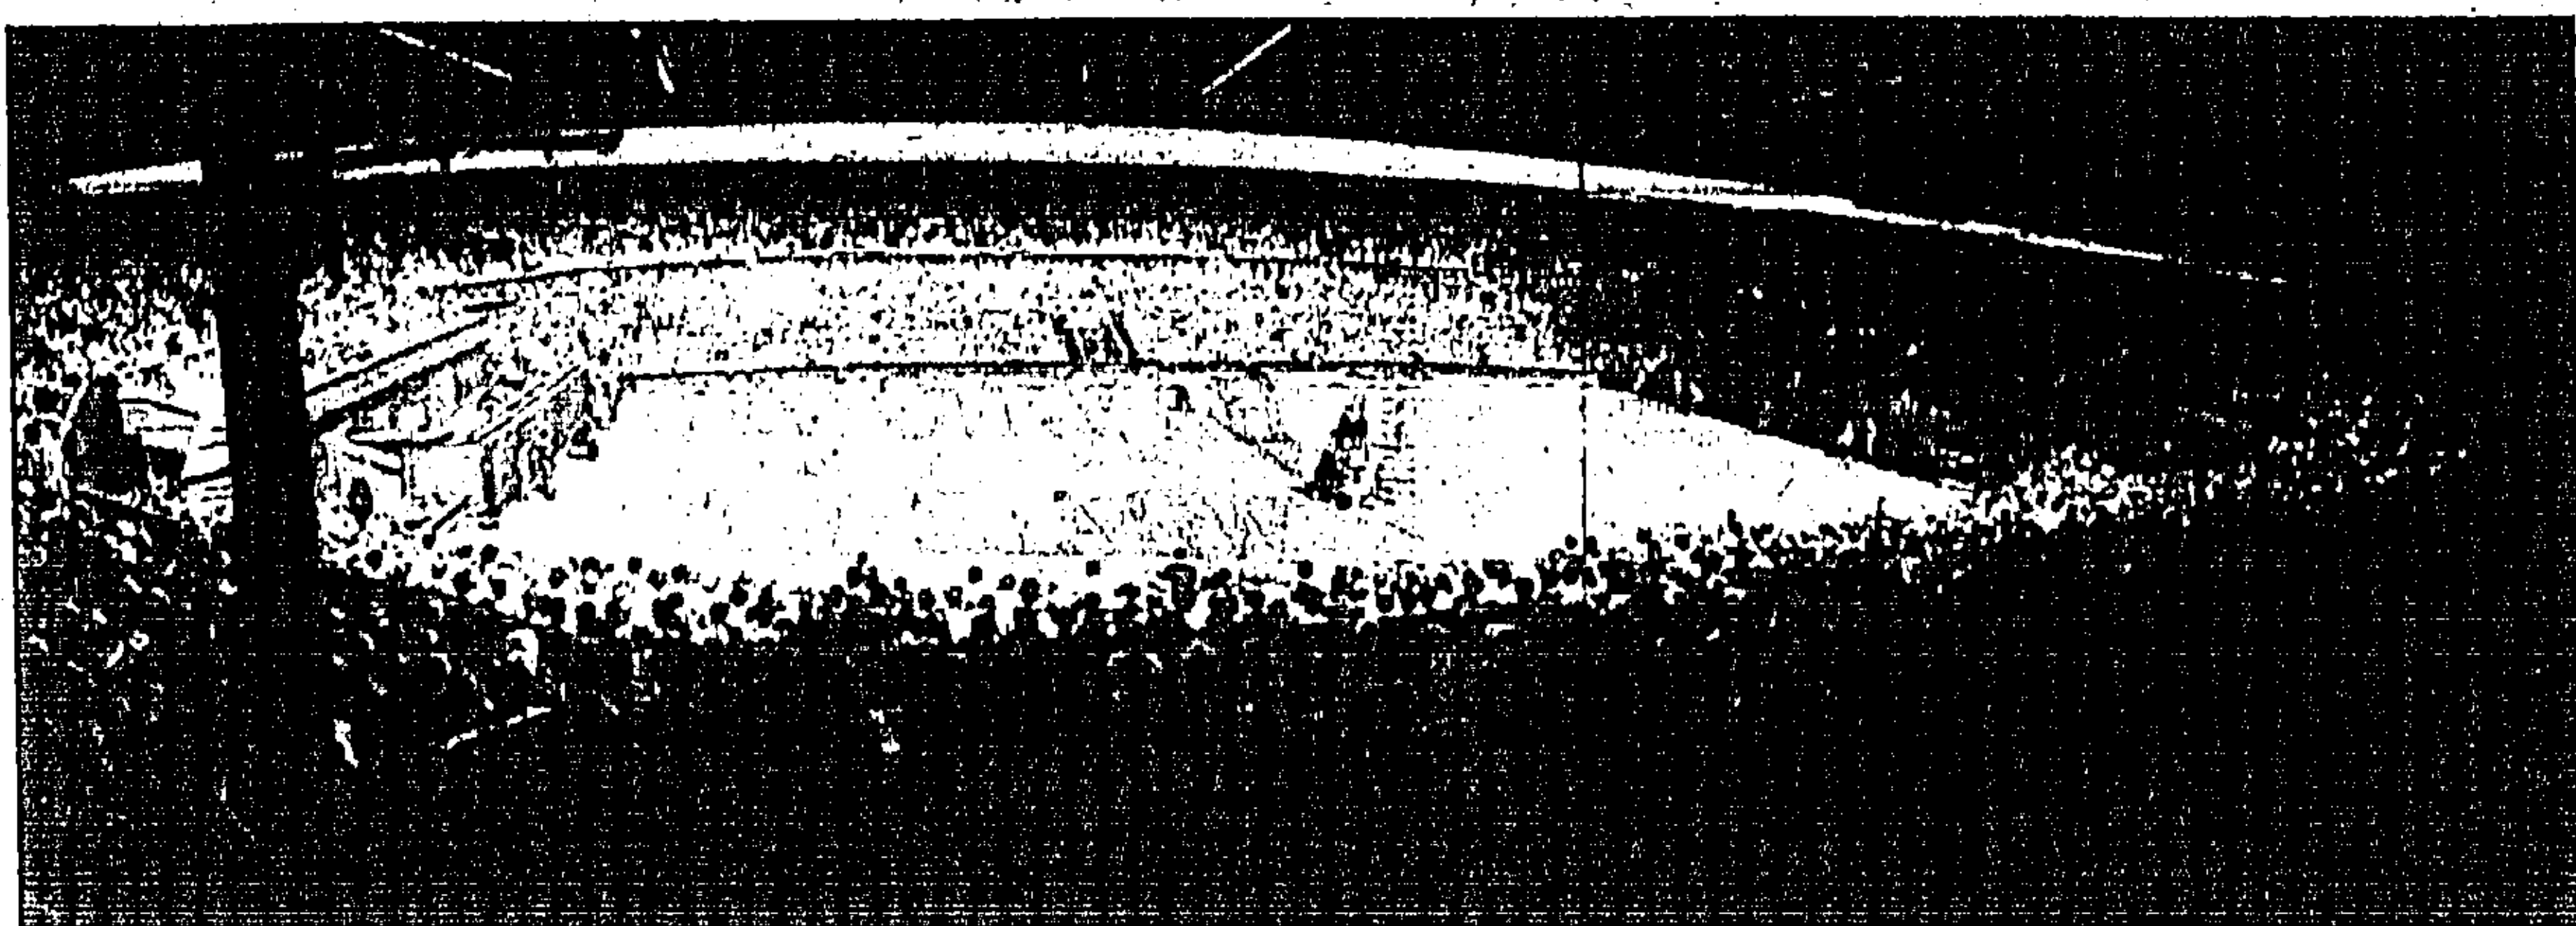

"Like this you are holding your hands where you expect the punches to come—before the punches start. That's wrong. It's much better to hold your hands some place else, where it's easy to move them quickly to block punches when they start. That way you don't leave the openings."

"Do you expect to knock out Floyd again?" he was asked. "I expect to beat him—just as I expected to beat him before the first fight. I've got the same chance next time. I had last night. Yes, I'll know more about him—but he'll know more about me, too."

Going To Sweden

The new champion and his family plan to fly to Miami on Monday for a rest. He is scheduled to return to Sweden late next week to attend to his various enterprises in Goteborg. He said he would return to the United States to train about eight weeks before his title defence.

Johansson's return-bout contract provides that his entire purse be held in escrow until receipts. Patterson gets 30 per cent of the net gate and "slicing" percentages up to 80 per cent on "theatre-TV, radio and movies."

The new 140-degree action panoramic camera turns its attention on the world's greatest tennis tournament as the 1959 Wimbledon gets under way. Second seeded Neale Fraser of Australia had the honour of opening the tournament against Pierre Darmon of France on the famed centre court since last year's winner Ashley Cooper is now a professional. He lost the first game to love, and then brought his big service in to action to win 6-4, 6-4, 6-2.

WIMBLEDON TENNIS

Quarter-Finals Of Men's Singles Today

Wimbledon, June 29.

Top-seeded Alex Olmedo of Peru and Los Angeles and sixth-seeded Luis Ayala of Chile will clash in an all-South American quarter-final today to open the second week of the Wimbledon tennis championships.

After a day of rest yesterday, the tournament will resume with Olmedo, the odds-on favourite in the men's singles, meeting Ayala in the first centre court match.

All four men's singles quarter-finals are scheduled for today. Fifth-seeded Barry Mackay of Dayton, Ohio, the only native-born United States player who reached the men's quarter-finals, will meet second-seeded Neale Fraser of Australia in the second match on the No. 1 court.

In the other quarter-finals, fourth-seeded Bobby Wilson of Britain will meet eighth-seeded Roy Emerson of Australia and Rod Laver of Australia will play Jean-Claude Molinari of France.

The women's singles quarter-finals are scheduled for Tuesday. Fourth-seeded Darlene Hard of Montebello, California, plays eighth-seeded Ann Haydon of Britain, Sally Moore of Bakersfield, California, meets Yolanda Ramirez of Mexico, second-seeded Angela Mortimer, Britain, clashes with Sandra Reynolds, South Africa, and Maria Bueno, Brazil, will take on Edda Buding, Stateless.—UPI.

Rough Tactics Among Jockeys Mar The 1959 Flat-Racing Season

By CLIVE GRAHAM

This 1959 flat-racing season has brought about a series of feuds among the top jockeys, English, Australian and French, riding both in France and England.

These jealousies must be considered largely responsible for the increase in the rough tactics which have recently marked the race-riding in the two countries. French jockeys returned home after the recent Epsom to report that this famous classic was "more like a stock-car race."

They spoke feelingly. In the first half mile, the favourite Shantung, second favourite Princeson, and the fancied outsider Dan Cupid all suffered severe buffeting. George Moore, diplomatic Australian rider of Princeson, admitting that his mount stumbled and cannoned into Shantung, said afterwards: "It was just one of those unlucky incidents for which no one can be blamed."

Freddie Palmer, French-born rider of Shantung, thought differently. He has claimed since that an unidentified English jockey had shuttled Princeson on to his mount.

Shantung, anyway, was struck into and momentarily lamed. After being five lengths last at Tattenham Corner he ran on into third place, giving the impression that he was an unlucky loser.

Roger Poincelot on Dan Cupid also expressed his disapproval at the lack of fairway afforded him by English rivals.

Others

These sentiments cannot be entirely ascribed to poor sportsmanship, and there is no doubt that the exceptionally firm grip at Epsom caused horses to suffer from the jarring impact and deviate from their line unintentionally. Well, maybe.

There have been a number of occasions when jockeys have struck one with their whip at other horses and their riders.

At a northern meeting recently I saw one jockey crack a rival over his hand in the last 50 yards of a close finish. This could, of course, have been an accidental blow delivered quite unintentionally. Well, maybe.

The Film

Such incidents have given rise to a clamour for the film-patrol movie-camera supervision of races, on the lines employed now in many other countries. Under this system a permanent photographic record is available for inspection by the stewards within a few minutes of each race finish.

During her Canadian tour this month, the Queen will attend the running of the historic Queen's Plate at Woodbine race-course, Ontario. There she will see the film-patrol in action, and I cannot help but think that she will be favourably impressed by the speed and efficiency of its working. —(London Express Service).

Nortje Wins S. Africa Marathon

Johannesburg, June 28. David Nortje, 23-year-old Johannesburg clerk, today won the South African Marathon Runners' Club annual "Golden Reef" marathon, covering the 26 miles 385 yards from Balaire to Johannesburg in two hours, 39 mins. 22 secs.

It was the first marathon for Nortje, who is South African cross-country champion. Reporter.

India's Hockey Win In Kenya

Nairobi, June 28. The All-India touring men's hockey team, holders of the Olympic title, beat Kenya 1-0 in an international match watched by a capacity crowd of 30,000 here today. The winning goal was scored by Indian centre-forward B.R. Sebastian in the first half. Reporter.

Johansson's Home Town Argues Over Reception

Gothenburg, June 28.

A proposal to give new world heavyweight champion Ingemar Johansson a civic reception here in his home town is being opposed by Mr. J. A. Fagerberg, a Gothenburg city councillor, who says the council should have nothing to do with "such a brutal sport" as boxing.

Other councillors who think the city should give Ingemar an official reception are visiting Mr. Fagerberg at his country house over the weekend in an effort to get him to withdraw his opposition.

UNSUITABLE

But Mr. Fagerberg has the support of the council Chairman, Mr. Ernst Jungen, and some other members who consider it "unsuitable" for the council to take any official steps towards welcoming the Swedish boxer when he returned from his triumphant victory over Floyd Patterson in New York.

Most of the Gothenburg councillors are on holiday at present and no formal meeting has so far been called to debate the matter.

But whatever the council decides, the local police say they are counting on a crowd of several thousand at Gothenburg airport when Johansson returns.—Reuter.

Australian Subscription
Ponies 1960

The Stewards have ordered a batch of 120 Australian Subscription Ponies to race in 1960 and they now invite Members to subscribe for them.

Application forms may be obtained from the Secretary's Office, Alexandra House, 8th Floor.

The Subscription List will close at NOON on Tuesday, 30th June, 1959.

By Order of the Stewards,
A. E. ARNOLD,
Secretary.

"As they come into the straight, number one leads with a terrific right to the head—number two follows with a smart crack across the knuckles with his whip—another blow to the head—now it's number three who's in trouble! Number five's coming up with a beautiful right cross to the ear of number six—HE'S DOWN! and it's number two taking the lead—laying into everybody with his whip—ONE! TWO! ONE! TWO!—only one furlong to go before the bell..."

PEOPLE IN THE NEWS

A LIFE NEARLY SLIPS AWAY AS THE SWIMMER'S SILENT ENEMY CLOSES IN

Killer Cramp Strikes Channel Girl

IN THE WATER... Ned struggles to keep his frightened pupil's head above the waves. He was already wearing swimming trunks, but he dived in with his watch on.

It Was Touch And Go Veteran Ned Dives To The Rescue

Edinburgh.
GERDA OLSSON
was saved from drowning in the Firth of Forth two Sundays ago.

Just these 14 words tell the news. But behind them lies a story of as many nightmare minutes.

Thirteen-stone Gerda aimed to be the first woman to swim
across the Forth and back.

To her it was a small task,
for next month she planned to swim the Channel.

It was 11.30 a.m. when she took the plunge at Granton and struck out for Burntisland.

There was a fresh wind and a heavy swell. But 25-year-old Gerda made good progress. For she is no weakling in the water.

A mile from the Fife shore it happened. She doubled up with cramped legs. And the guide laughed on—100 yards
ahead.

How did Gerda feel? "I was frightened, very frightened," she said. "I felt so alone, with nobody near me."

But the men in the launch
turned back when they lost sight of her—and the rescue drama
began.

International swimming veteran Ned Barlow, 62, who coached Gerda for the attempt,
dived in as the launch circled.
He helped Gerda to stay afloat.

Then 24-year-old motor salesman Tom Elliot plunged in fully clothed and helped Ned to sling
a rope round her.

"They inched their way to the side of the boat. But as walking hands reached over the side
her thickly greased body slipped from their grasp."

For a horrifying moment
Gerda, now exhausted, disappeared beneath the waves.
Then the rescuers slipped a rope round her arms and legs
and hauled her aboard.

As they heeded for shore
Gerda and some of her helpers were seasick.

That night the well-built
daughter of a Swedish golfer
was having second thoughts about her Channel bid.

At her home in King's Road, Perthshire, she said: "This has put me off, of course. But by tomorrow morning I'll probably feel different."

Why did Gerda get cramp—
the sea's so-called killer? "I was very silly. . . I didn't grease my stomach before setting off."

'The Kingdom & The Beauty' Moving, Exquisite & Lovely

"THE Kingdom and the Beauty," the film that gained the
honours at the recent Asian Film Festival,
held at Kuala Lumpur,
makes its bow to Hongkong tonight.

The actual gala premiere is being held at the Hoover Theatre, but its twin, the Gala in Kowloon, is screening
"The Kingdom and the Beauty"
also.

His Excellency, the Governor will be attending the Hoover,
so that this film which honours
Hongkong by the perfection of its production, is having a fine
send off.

In saying I am amazed to find such a beautiful film made in Hongkong, I am by no means minimising the film producers here. I am acquainted with the local studios, I know something of their resources, but when I saw such exquisite sets which reproduce in beauty the delightful countryside of China, a whole village street, the Imperial Palace of the Empress of China, I was amazed.

The story is a tale of long ago; a sad story, a story of a

Lin Dai, as the betrayed village maiden in "The Kingdom and the Beauty."

was as old as the world itself,
a story of which our own Will Shakespeare said: "Men were deceivers ever."

From a European's point of view, the film is a good introduction of how the last of the Manchu went about their affairs.

The young Emperor, given over to the beauties of his Court, growing up the spoiled darling of luxury, and acquiring, or so it seemed to me absolute feminine qualities.

For instance, when he has practised deception, and is brought up against the strict Confucian code of his mentor,
he exclaims almost angrily,
"Why didn't you remind me?"
As if it were his tutor's business.

to keep an appointment book of moral obligations.

I would not presume to venture upon what is right and what is wrong according to the code of a people. But the longer I live, the more I am convinced that all people subscribe to a common code, in spite of what textbooks say.

At any rate, hearts break for reasons common to both Peking and London. And the shame a village girl of China suffers is the same as that of a girl in a Thomas Hardy novel.

But if I am too serious about something that happened long ago, it is only because I was much moved by the picture, and thought it just too exquisite for words.

Lin Dai is simply lovely, and as accomplished as she is beautiful. Mr. Chao Lei, who appears with her, seemed, from a foreigner's point of view, just that darling of fortune that history makes him out. The film carries subtleties in English.
These are excellent, and permit
even the newcomer to follow the story.

So there I leave it. I consider "The Kingdom and the Beauty," a notable contribution to the film industry, and an honour to all concerned.

BY THE WAY

by Beachcomber

I KNOW a man, obsessed with weather, whose first action on returning home is to tap his barometer. I need not do that.
Thirty-five years ago I found in a shop a handsome old barometer which did not work. It said "Set Fair," and "Set Fair" it is, to this day. People who litterate themselves by reading and listening to weather reports are always cheered by a glance at it. The weather, ahead is always fine, and since gadgets
are now regarded as infallible, no doubts are expressed. Perhaps, when storms come later on, someone says: "That barometer was all wrong!" Oh, no.
In that case it is the weather that is all wrong. Whatever happens I live, according to my romantic barometer, in that island-valley of Avilion. Where falls no hail, or rain, or only snow.

Not ever wind blows loudly.

How to treat Old

Father Time
NOTHING gives one such a serene mind as mechanical
things which do not work.
Think of all the fluster, and bother you avoid if you have a clock or a watch which has stopped permanently at, say, 11.21. There is always the moment in the day when that clock is as slavishly accurate as any pig could wish, and as the world is not a mechanical convenience, that moment is sufficient tribute to pay to the meticulous hustlers. The rest of the day is your own, and Old Father Time loves to be treated carelessly; to lay down his seize for a while and ask himself why people take him so seriously. Watch him enjoying the joke against himself when you mention Eternity.

Interlude
Prologue: I presume you are joking. How could your newspaper, for instance, be run on such lines?

Myself: There would be a sundial on the roof, and on cloudy days, a reporter, stationed in the street, would ask passers by the time, and telephone the latest information to the office.

Prologue: A cumbersome
method. Quite absurd.

Feudalism still rampant
WHEN a Socialist agitator called at a house in his constituency the door was opened by a maid. "How utterly foolish!" said he with a frown of disapproval.

SCIENCE

Revolutionary Method For Blasting Earth-Covered Rock

A NEW and revolutionary excavation and blasting method—the outcome of 10 years of experimental work and the collaboration of four Swedish industries—is at present being used for the excavation of the new outlet from the harbour of Norrköping, on the Central Swedish East Coast.

Featuring several interesting innovations, it enables blasting into the rock to be formed without previous excavation of covering layers of moraine, clay and earth. What is claimed to be the world's largest delayed-interval blast—when considering the number of holes drilled—was recently detonated at this site by means of the new method.

The system, which has been named the "Lindo method" after the name of the canal that is at present being excavated, is based on the Atlas Copco compressed-air method with series of detonations, but differs from the normal system in that the rock-steel preper is surrounded by a steel tube, equipped with a circular crown bit, used to prevent hose matter from caving in when the bit is being removed.

DISCONNECTED

The steel, which protrudes about an inch from the tube, works in conjunction with the latter, and when both have got a firm grip (about 4 in.) on the rock bottom, the tube is disconnected from the drilling movement, while the crown bit continues boring into the rock to the desired depth. When the bit is withdrawn the tube constitutes the connection between the surface and the rock.

In order not to destroy the expensive tube and its crown in the blast it is subsequently replaced by a plastic tube, through which the detonator is pushed into place by means of compressed air, use of which and charging entails a great saving of time and manpower.

The contractors, AB Skanska Cementgjuteri, well-known Swedish experts on building and general contracting, have evolved this system, using Atlas Copco compressors and drills and specially designed bits and crowns from the Sandvik works. The charging and blasting details have been worked out by another Swedish firm, Nitroglycerin AB.

The reason for evolving the "Lindo method" was mainly the danger of the surrounding slopes of wet clay and earth caving in if conventional excavation methods had been resorted to. With the new method a firm mixture of rock debris and surface layers is obtained, which is subsequently removed by means of a shovel dredger.

ROCK PROFILE

The rock profile at the bottom of the planned canal is very uneven, some peaks protruding almost to the surface and others lying much further down. This has presented various problems both in the work of drilling and in calculating the necessary force of the detonator for each different hole. However, the latest and largest blast, which consisted of 4,750 different charges, is reported to have been highly successful. Fifty-six tons of dynamite were used, distributed amongst 12,500 detonators, which were blasted in 31 series at varying intervals.

Automatic Precision In Grinding

AN automatic control unit which completely does away with hand measuring previously essential to grinding operations has been developed by a UK firm of precision engineers.

Cylindrical grinding machines, when fitted with the unit, can accurately and automatically grind the work to required size within one ten-thousandth of an inch. The grinding operation approaches correct size, the unit automatically changes from coarse to fine grinding, shuts down further grinding, and retracts the grinding wheel.

Coloured signal lamps show the operator that this is being done. The equipment can be fitted to all types of cylindrical grinding machines which have a power operated in-feed for the wheel head and is best suited for plunging cut or short traverse grinding.

Auto-sizing, it is claimed, permits higher production, rate, elimination of scrap, reduction of operator fatigue and similar advantages for super-precision grinding. It also enables the use of semi-skilled operators and is suitable for use on small quantities, as well as in mass production. (Taylor, Taylor & Hobson, Leicester, England.)

New Lightweight Television Camera

A NEW broadcast television camera was on display recently when the publishers of an international directory held a reception at Woburn Abbey on the estate of the Duke of Bedford. A television studio was erected and furnished with a selection of modern equipment.

Considerable attention was paid to the new camera which provides a high-quality picture but is cheaper, more economical on running costs, lighter in weight and easier to handle than the average television camera.

The camera with self-contained control unit weighs only 68 lbs as compared with the 250 lbs or so of the average studio camera with its associated control unit. By extensive use of printed circuits an overall size of only 14½ ins high x 15 ins long x 10½ ins wide has been achieved.

The entire camera channel consists of only two units, the camera proper and the power supply/termination unit. The camera is completely self-contained and incorporates all the operating controls in addition to a 7 in picture display and 2½ in waveform display.

SMALL DIAMETER
Due to the small diameter of the target's photo-conductive layer, excellent depth of focus is possible even with lenses working at large apertures. A four-position turret is used, with provision for mounting a wide range of lenses or a zoom lens.

A particularly interesting feature of the new camera is that the main operating controls are only four in number and are fitted on the back panel of the camera itself. This simplification and positioning of controls enables television authorities, (Marconi's Wireless Telegraph Company Ltd, Chelmsford, Essex, England.)

Orders for twelve of the new camera channels have already been placed by the BBC, while further equipments are to be supplied to Independent Television programme contractors and to overseas television authorities. (Marconi's Wireless Telegraph Company Ltd, Chelmsford, Essex, England.)

Dry Type Flame Proof Transformer

ONE of the exhibits at the Mining Machinery Exhibition opening in London on July 9 will be a dry type flame proof transformer. Unlike the conventional oil-cooled unit it can be located with complete safety adjacent to the working coal face instead of at the regulation 300 yard minimum distance.

At the eighth Electrical Engineers Exhibition in March the transformer won a high award—the Silver Plaque—for the most outstanding industrial equipment exhibited. It was judged on originality, design and construction, standard of workmanship, labour saving attributes and ease of operation and maintenance. Brush Electrical Engineering Co, Ltd, Loughborough, Leicestershire, England.)

UK Photo Material Orbits Earth

A UK firm made what is believed to be the first photographic material ever to be put into orbit round the earth. The Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defence in Washington has confirmed to Ilford Limited that the special emulsion carried in Discovision II for cosmic ray records were produced by them. It is understood that similar cosmic ray experiments will be conducted, using Ilford emulsions in the forthcoming flight in the Discovision series.

Weekly Report On The American Economy

1959—A BOOM YEAR?

Official Indicators Show Uninterrupted Boosts

New York, June 28.

U.S. business continued to talk of a boom year this past week, undeterred by the unsolved riddle of steel labour strife and the fact that the economy stood on the threshold of the customary summer let-down.

All official indicators continued to speak in terms of uninterrupted boosts. But some privately compiled indices which—because of their unofficial nature—are more up to date than the official ones, showed the first signs of the predicted summer season slackening.

This still fell within the framework of normality, U.S. business sources said. They claimed whatever the third quarter losses, they will be more than made up in the fourth with the total result for a 1959 boom. The only thing that might upset these expectations, they admitted, would be a protracted steel strike.

Expiration

At mid-week, only a few days before the expiration of the labour contract affecting some 12 major producers, there was growing likelihood that contract negotiations will continue beyond the July 1 strike date, possibly through mid-July, with production continuing on a status quo basis.

Although this was a makeshift arrangement and neither side had its heart in it, steel production last week actually rose by 10,000 tons to 2,620,000 tons and production for this past week—the last before a strike—was scheduled at 92.8 per cent of capacity, or 2,627,000 tons. This despite the fact that wildcat walkouts were already plaguing the industry.

Full strike machinery, however, has already been alerted by both sides and steel management vowed it would start shutting down as soon as word is received that labour rejected the offer to extend—contract negotiations beyond the strike deadline.

Meanwhile official statistics continued their tale of a steady climb. On top of record May figures for industrial production and personal income came news that retail sales in that month rung up a total of $18.3 billion. This was two per cent above April and ten per cent above May 1958.

Illusory

Business Week magazine admitted that some of the spurt in hard goods was illusory in the sense that the post-recession inventory buildup—raised production above the level of sales. A note of warning came from Sales Management magazine. It said consumers may not be playing their expected full part in the current economic upswing. It urged coining the consumer to high spending through more advertising pressure and warned over-supply could become the worst in recent U.S. economic history unless promotional pressures are created and result in greater demand.

Over-supply was the thing that the oil industry was still fighting. Its position was unique in the sense that it was almost the only sector of the economy, apart possibly from shipping, that still cannot shake off the curse of the recession. But the nature of its problems, just like those plaguing non-ferrous metals, is more worldwide and therefore not purely typical of the current U.S. economic picture.

Still, U.S. refiners last week cut production by 20,000 barrels daily. American Petroleum Institute figures showed crude oil currently refined in the U.S. is half a million barrels daily over a year ago figure, resulting in petrol stocks last week being more than 12,500,000 barrels above a year ago.

These developments came in the wake of apparently premature oil industry prediction that larger summer demand would help alleviate the industry's plight.

The Highest

Copper was in a similar position. Prices tumbled further all around the world this past week, leaving the U.S. price of 31½ cents a pound the highest on the world market. Over-supply again was behind this latest depression of the price structure and the fact that U.S. copper miners decided to stay on their jobs after the expiration of their labour contract June 30.

But to continue with official statistics:

★ Employment netted a one million gain from April to May, rounding off a 68 million figure. But only 240,000 of that total gain came from the ranks of the unemployed who now number 3.4 million. The majority of the jobs were filled from new labour pools.

★ Electricity distributed last week totalled 13,331 million kilowatt hours, up 11.6 per cent from a year ago but slightly down from the 13,503 million generated in the previous week.

★ One of the strongest sources of confidence for businessmen are statistics showing estimates of capital spending this year on new plant and equipment. The Securities and Exchange Commission and the Department of Commerce jointly expect these investments this year to reach $32,585,000,000, an increase of almost $800 million over the 1958 total predicted by the same agencies. Just May's new figure would be $2 billion higher than in 1958 but still more than $4 billion below the all-time high of $37 billion posted in 1957.

★ Hand in hand with planned investment came news of a spurt in private tract awards in the first five months of 1959. They shot up 10 per cent over last year's $4.6 billion. They accounted for 49 per cent of all construction awards that were let compared with 40 per cent in 1958 and 47 per cent in 1957.

This generated hope that if the pace continues, private construction may overtake public construction and regain the lead it lost three years ago and possibly set the stage for a new boom in the construction industry.

News of the first slackening in the pace of U.S. economy—the expected summer slow down—came from privately compiled indices, such as that of the New York Herald Tribune. It showed—after 20 weeks of uninterrupted growth—the first slight drop of 0.1 per cent which was accounted for mostly by a decline in financial activity, such as stock sales and bank clearings, and in marketing and distribution, particularly car loadings.—UPI

COTTON FUTURES DULL IN NEW YORK

New York, June 28.

The cotton market was a dull affair again this past week with all but the nearby July contract finishing on the downside.

At Friday's close the list ruled 2½ points higher to 19 cents lower, or $1.40 a bale higher to 95 cents lower than last week's close.

Most of the trading centred around the old July contract because of evening-up operations prior to, and after the first notice day on Wednesday. Initially, long liquidation carried July downward but the evidence of buying orders at 34.50 stemmed the decline and prices moved up gradually. The absence of notice after the first evening-up day spurred further covering to lift the delivery above the 34.80 level where it finished the week at 34.67-68.

VOLATILE

One spot firm said it is possible that the old July contract may become highly volatile in the near future. Evening-up operations between now and the expiration date on July 15. There appears to be full arguments for the price to advance or decline, the firm added.

Trading in and other derivatives was generally light as most traders awaited word on farm legislation.

American Move Against Japanese Silk

Washington, June 28.

The US Tariff Commission last Friday rejected the appeal of American silk manufacturers for higher tariff or quota barriers against Japanese and other foreign silk fabrics.

The Commission ruled that the American manufacturers had failed to submit enough data to support the American Silk Council's claims of serious injury from import competition. Consequently, it declined to apply tariff or quota restrictions on silk imports from Japan.

Shares Advance During Week On Wall Street

New York, June 28.

Stocks advanced during the past week in what many Wall Street experts described as the beginning of the traditional summer rally.

U.S. GOLD STOCKS FALL TO LOW

Washington, June 28.

United States gold stocks in the week ended Wednesday fell below $20 billion for the first time in nearly two decades, Federal Reserve System figures showed.

The major factor in the decline was the payment by the U.S. to fulfill its increased gold subscription to the International Monetary Fund.

U.S. gold holdings fell by $364 million during the week to the Wednesday total of $19,771,000,000. Of the decline $343,750,000 represented payment to the monetary fund. Stocks on Wednesday were the lowest since the $19,760,000,000 on June 19, 1940.

In 1940 U.S. gold stocks were being built up from the depression lows as allied governments dipped into their reserves to finance war operations.

The current gold hoard—still one-half the world's supply—was $763 million under the start of the year. The decline since the beginning of 1958 has been a little over $3 billion.—UPI Industrial shares closed the week at a level only seven-tenths of one per cent under their record high set on May 29 at 443.72. Ralls were 1.5 per cent below their 1958 high set on May 23 at 109.67.

Volume was seen as disappointing at 14,772,430 shares for the week, a daily average of 2,954,480 shares. This was slightly larger than the previous week's 13,125,302 shares or a daily average of 2,625,060 shares.

Oil And Rails

Two moves of interest occurred during the week. One was a rise in the oilfield backward oil in the Thursday session. The other was a bit of strength in rails. The latter followed a Senate move, later rescinded, to lop off the 10 per cent tax on passenger fares. The elimination of the cut on Friday brought a small decline in the carrier shares. Car loadings rose to a 20-month high and rail earnings for May were up sharply.

There was nothing in the news to account for the rise in oils which have been hit by high inventories and softening of prices.

Chemical issues met demand on estimates of high earnings for the leading companies. Allied Chemical gained six points and Du Pont nearly four. American Motors, one of the most active issues in recent session, ran up 4½ points on estimates of high earnings. Chrysler firmed while General Motors rose a point and Ford gained nearly three. Goodyear started in the tyres with a gain of six points on a sharp jump in earnings.

Steel Strike

Imminence of a strike appeared to work against the steel shares where Carpenter lost eight points and Lukens nearly four. U.S. Steel lost a fraction and Bethlehem gained one.

Sales so far in 1959 have totalled 430,604,059 shares, including around 442 million for the first half of the year. This is the largest since 1930 when the first half total was 493,204,470 shares.

The Dow-Jones industrial average closed the week at 439.25 up 9.40 points from the previous week's close; railroad 107.17 up 2.90; utility 68.10 up 0.32; and 65 stocks 214.42 up 2.91.

At the week's close the industrial average was up 101.07 points or 33.7 per cent over the close of the first half of 1958 and up 55.80 points or 9.5 per cent over the close of 1958.—UPI

FORMOSA, THAILAND TRADE

Taipei, June 28.

Formosa's trade with Thailand in the first three months this year has increased by about eight times from the corresponding period last year, it was disclosed today.

The sharp increase was attributed to the Thai government ban on Communist Chinese imports.

Trade officials said Formosa's exports to Thailand reached $1,800,000 in the three months period against an import from Thailand of $180,000.

The official trade figures are being taken to up the import from Thailand as a means to help balance the trade between the two countries.—UPI

Exchange Rates

London, June 28. The pound sterling closed the week at 101.07 points or 33.7 per cent over the close of the first half of 1958 and up 55.80 points or 9.5 per cent over the close of 1958.—UPI

RECORD PROSPERITY IN NEXT 18 MONTHS SAYS U.S. MAGAZINE

New York, June 28.

Americans can look forward to record prosperity for at least the next 18 months and a balanced federal budget by fiscal 1960, Fortune Magazine predicted today.

All the same the July issue of the magazine said, "The risks of inflation or recession appear lower than is usual at this stage of prosperity."

Fortune forecast a rise of $30 billion in gross national product over the next 18 months lifting the total output of goods and services to the $500 billion level by the spring of 1960.

Tax Receipts

It also said the boom should swell government tax receipts to produce a 1960 budgetary surplus of "a couple of billion." Tax receipts, it added, run at slightly above four per cent of the national income. Fortune said, "Under these circumstances, it added, there would be no danger of inflation unless wage costs advance very sharply."

The magazine said that prices during the next 18 months are not likely to rise by more than one or two per cent a year. Present trends, the magazine continued, point to less dependency on government spending and inventory accumulation and more on investment and consumer spending.

Fortune predicted, should increase two per cent a year to reach a record rate of 32.5 billion by the end of 1960. Capital spending for new plant and equipment in the period, it added, will be an annual rate of one billion, the magazine forecast said.—UPI

NATIONAL NEWSPAPER SHUTDOWN THREAT IN BRITAIN

London, June 28.
Britain tonight appeared on the brink of becoming a nation without newspapers.

London newspapers, which have a national circulation running into many millions of copies a day, were threatened today in the strike of 160,000 printers which has already closed nearly every provincial newspaper.

Weekly magazines have disappeared or have printed greatly-reduced issues as far afield as West Germany. Supplies of printed food labels and nearly every other printed item were dwindling fast.

Today supplies of printing ink to 11 London newspapers were cut by a walkout of workers at manufacturing companies. One ink maker has notified its workers they will be out of a job by Friday.

Minister of Labour, Iain Macleod, has steadfastly refused to interfere in the dispute so far because printers' unions have refused an arbitration settlement of their claim.

Agreement

The Council of the Newspaper Proprietors Association scheduled a meeting early this week to study the situation.

Under a "gentleman's agreement," all newspapers belonging to the Association will stop publishing if one of them is forced to halt publication because of a labour dispute.

It was this agreement, as much as a shortage of ink supplies, which could turn Britain into a newspaperless nation.

But in addition, R. W. Brighshaw, Chief Officer of the nation-wide Printers' Unions Society, has replied to the threat by the third ink firm to fire its employees by threatening to call-out workers from all ink firms if any manufacturer dismisses its men.

"We can get tough, too," he said.

Bob Willis, General Secretary of the London Typographical Society, threatened to stop government printing if the government shows "partiality" towards the employers.

The situation behind the strike, which began in phases last week, was a complicated one. Ten unions were involved, striking for a 10 per cent pay increase and a 40-hour week.

Not Part

Unions charge the employers have refused to "resume open, straightforward negotiations."

London's huge daily or Sunday newspapers were not a part of the dispute. However, the two companies supplying ink to seven of the largest daily newspapers and five of the major Sunday newspapers were struck in a related action. The dispute in the third firm threatened to dry up ink supplies for all newspapers.

All of the 11 newspapers affected by the walkout normally carry enough ink to print three to six days of newspapers. It was believed possible they might be able to obtain additional ink from other firms.—UPI.

BAD CABLE RECEPTION

Reception of press cables from many parts of the world was bad this morning, particularly from the United States.

An officer of Cable and Wireless, when contacted, said the reception of cables from U.S. was a little disrupted and "sub-normal."

He could not ascertain the reason off hand but "probably it was due to sun spots."

Lam Chai's Last Request

The last request of 32-year-old Lam Chai, to the Kowloon District Court this morning before he was led away to begin a three-and-a-half-year prison sentence was that he be given a European diet in goal.

When the court asked him if he had anything to say, Lam Chai replied, "Yes, I request your Honour to write to the Prison Authority to let me have European food."

He did not give any reason for his request.

Judge A. A. Higgins, replied: "I shall do no such thing. That decision rests with the Prison Authority. Anyway, you will be given the appropriate diet."

ARRESTED

Lam Chai pleaded guilty to a charge of burglary. Chief Insp. T. W. Wheeler said the accused went to the ground floor of 4 Fuk Shing Lane in Hok Lo Village on the night of May 24-25.

But after he had bundled some clothing and was ready to leave, the occupant of the house, Tsang Lo, returned and arrested him.

Besides being given a three-and-a-half-year prison term, Lam Chai was also placed under supervision for two years.

He admitted eight previous convictions and that he had been released from goal on April 13.

New Film Company In Hongkong

The Golden Horse Motion Picture Co held a press reception at the Paramount yesterday in commemoration of the company's official inauguration.

Formed by a group of veteran directors, actors, actresses and independent producers, the new film company will produce Mandarin, Cantonese as well as Amoy dialect pictures.

For the first year, they plan to produce six films, three in Mandarin and three in Amoy dialect.

Filming of the first production, a tragedy, will start on Wednesday, July 1.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Naive

Sir,—I am amused to note that "Hollywood," Moscow and Mr. Green, that columnist of the Beaverbrook Press states with disarming naivety: "The Quiet American" was filmed not long ago by Hollywood, and the Hollywood story twisted the original so much that the English hero became a villain."

My view is the story is so twisted that the Englishman becomes "the villain" (at least in the conventional sense) and less of a villain than in the original.

Kai Tak Landing Lights In Use Again

The landing lights on the new Kai Tak runway were successfully put into operation again early this morning when a Pan American chartered Stratocruiser took off for Honolulu.

The big four-engined aircraft left Kai Tak at 4 a.m. today for Cambodia, where it will pick up President Sukarno of Indonesia, and his party. It will then take them to Indonesia.

This brings the Indonesian President's two-month world tour to an end.

The pre-dawn take-off from Kai Tak marks the second time the recently-installed lighting system at the airport has been put into use.

They were switched on one night last week to guide a crippled German DC4 Skymaster down to a safe landing.

It is also the first pre-dawn take-off for quite a number of years.

From the Files

25 years AGO

SMART work by Traffic Sergeant McInnis resulted in the discovery of an MG Midget car belonging to Mr B. A. Proulx, the well-known jockey at Shek-O beach on Saturday morning.

The car was stolen a week ago and despite an extensive search, it was not found.

The owner had practically given it up for lost.

On Saturday, Sergeant McInnis found the car on the Shek-O beach hidden in the long grass and covered with two large sheets of matting.

The Police have detained a man.

NO less than 26 vernacular newspapers entered for Hongkong's estimated Chinese population of 800,000 last year, according to the annual report of the Secretary for Chinese Affairs.

Even the $3,000 registration fee required by the Government is no deterrent to budding newspaper proprietors for, although 18 mushroom newspapers passed out of existence last year, 15 new ones were registered.

Probably half of the 26 newspapers registered during 1958 have already become defunct.

CRITICISING "crude and revolting" cinema posters and advertising in Hongkong, the Rev. J. R. Higgins, Vicar of St Andrews said: "Let the cinema and theatre industries realise that it will be to their own interest to reform, or the public will take steps to protect itself."

"I refuse to believe that the public taste is as low as they would have us believe and the day will come when the cinema and theatre are taught that they cannot dictate to the community."

"They have in the past been given a fair amount of rope and they have enough now to hang themselves."

"The public is tolerant and will allow much, but let its best feelings be continuously outraged and the industry will get short shrift."

"No doubt there is a public which wants such entertainment, and there are some Englishmen who think that anything is permissible east of Suez."

"Such people should be disregarded; they are a menace to the community, they betray their fellow countrymen and the civilisation from which they came and lower the prestige of the Empire. It is time in any case that the Government took the matter in hand."

Unregistered School: 'Head' Fined $2,400

The headmaster of the Wan Fui Clansmen Association school, Lee Tin-hon, of 132 Des Voeux Road Central, second floor, was convicted on a charge of managing an unregistered school and fined $2,400 with the alternative of six months' goal by Mr E. Corbally at Central Magistracy this morning.

Mr D. N. E. Rea, Crown Counsel, prosecuted, assisted by Detective Inspector A. T. Shelly.

Mr E. Fisher, assistant secretary of the Registration of Schools, Education Department, testified that on May 16, 1958, he received two documents, one being an application to the Chief Officer, Fire Brigade, applying for a permit for the occupation of the Wan Fui Clansmen School in 132, Des Voeux Road Central, signed by a Mr Au Tin-yam.

Witness said that the second document was a similar application to the Public Works Department signed by Mr Au Tin-yam.

On June 7 and 25, witness said that he received letters from the Fire Brigade and P.W.D. rejecting the application, the reasons being that the school premises had no fire precautions and there was an illegal structure—a wooden cock-loft—built between the second and third floors of the building.

Mr Fisher said that as a result of the letters, he wrote to the school, saying that the Education Department would be liable to prosecute if the school were still carrying on.

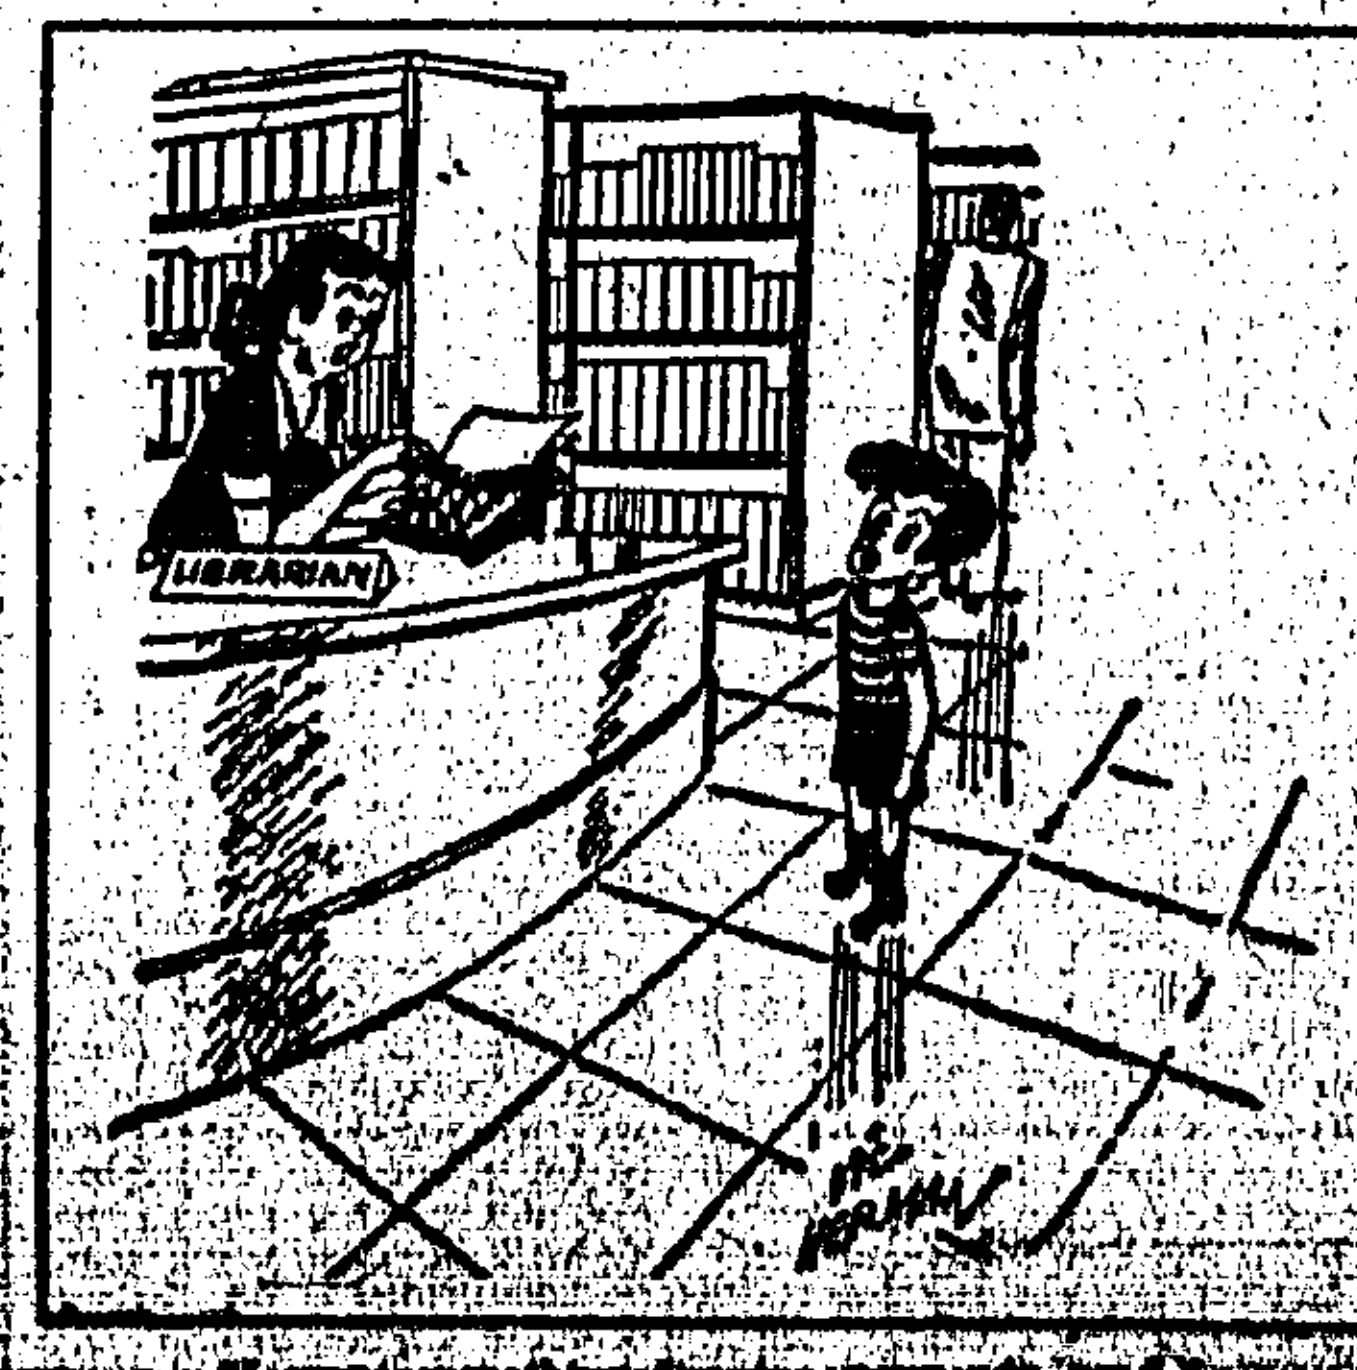

Two sub-inspectors of schools, Yung Kwong-sin and Ng Kwok-leung, testified that they went to the school and saw 35 pupils in a room studying.

Their ages ranged from five to eleven. A quantity of books and school fee receipts were seized and produced as evidence.

Young further testified that he saw defendant on March 3 this year and had a conversation with him.

Defendant told the witness that he was the supervisor and headmaster of the school and that he knew that the school was unregistered.
